Amtrak to restore disturbed wetlands

by Arlene Surprenant

Representatives from Amtrak met with the Wilmington Conservation Commission Wednesday to discuss how they plan to restore nine disturbed wetland and buffer areas. The areas, stretching from Dunkin' Donuts on Main Street to the Lake Street bridge and Nichols Street, all follow the MBTA commuter railroad line. While removing vegetation along the railroad's right of way, Amtrak contractor Roger Dines and Co. filled in some wetlands and removed vegetation within 100 feet of the wetlands without filing a notice of intent with the commission. As a result, the commission issued a cease and desist order and required railroad officials to appear before their board.

Wednesday's hearing has been continued to December 6. Before reaching that decision, however, commissioners reviewed restoration plans with Amtrak's engineer Eli Mistovich.

Mistovich said the area by the Fred Cain Bridge and Lubbers Brook was the section most severely impacted by the bulldozers who did the actual removal work. The other areas, he maintained, only suffered minor disturbances which were easily corrected. Board members and Conservation Administrator Eileen Flaherty disagreed.

"It was a very irritating thing for us to find out (about the work)," said Chairman Don Ugolini, who took Amtrak to task for not notifying his board beforehand.

Flaherty had written earlier in a letter that the total alterations are "rather extensive" and "more stringent mitigation measures" than those proposed by the applicant were called for.

The commission has reportedly asked Amtrak to guarantee there will be 75 percent growth of new seeds and plantings in the disturbed areas within two years. Mistovich argued that it would be hard to guarantee the growth because of the time of year and type of soil along the tracks. He added that bringing in loam would require the use of trucks which would cause more damage to the wetlands. Flaherty reminded Mistovich the violations were done without the board's knowledge and the areas should be restored before spring.

Tom Roussell tried to explain how his board worked. He told Mistovich "we try to be reasonable. Either we're working together (with you) or we're not."

Dennis Poltrino brought up a letter from the Environmental Protection Agency discussing similar violations to the Wetlands Protection Act by the same contractor. He told Mistovich it appears Amtrak has hired a contractor that does "whatever it wants." Mistovich replied this was the first he heard about other violations and he would look into the matter.

Commissioners will continue the hearing following a site walk of all nine areas.

Toppled Tuesday's high winds caused a few trees to fall in Wilmington. One fell across Moore Street at Wedgewood Avenue, blocking the street and knocking out power in the area.

Sling Somehow this telephone cable managed to hold up the weight of a large pine tree which fell on it on Moore Street.

WRA to evaluate 129/93 project

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington Redevelopment Authority agreed last week to evaluate the I-93/129 Interchange project to see if they should hire a consultant to provide technical expertise to the town.

Chairman Jay Donovan noted that Reading and proponents of Inwood Office Park both have their own consultants to protect their interests. He said it would be to the town's benefit to do the same. Donovan told his board if the project moves forward, it should be done with the best interest of Wilmington in mind.

"There's no reason why a project should continue if it has negative impacts to surrounding towns," Donovan said. Wilmington selectmen took a vote at a prior meeting unanimously opposing the project with the exception of a road widening to facilitate turns onto West Street.

Selectmen Chairman Robert Cain paid a brief visit to the authority Thursday to share his proposal to improve traffic flow in the area. Though he said a traffic light at the West Street intersection seems to be working, he added that he favored a plan to construct a slip ramp on West Street before the intersection to allow drivers to turn right directly onto 93. This, he said, might alleviate some of the traffic coming onto 129.

Cain felt it was up to the town to seek a "reasonable" intersection to handle traffic. He suggested using the services of the town engineer to keep expenses down.

WRA members agreed the interchange project is within their jurisdiction since they were given authority through town meeting to handle traffic from the Reading and Woburn lines to the Tewksbury line.

Donovan explained that because of the state's fiscal crisis, it is "critical" that the proposed gas tax be passed. The tax is needed to help fund traffic projects like the interchange project and the replacement of the Burlington Avenue bridge.

WRA members will meet with Wilmington selectmen on November 27 to discuss not only the fifth lane alternative for the town center project, but the interchange project as well.

Philosophy set for middle schools

by Arlene Surprenant

The Wilmington School Committee took another step closer to adopting a middle school concept as members unanimously approved a philosophy for the North and West Intermediate Schools. The philosophy states, in part, that the two intermediate schools will focus on "an educational program that recognizes and provides for the uniqueness of the individual." It goes on to say that in the middle school, "each student should have an opportunity for maximum growth in self-knowledge, in personal discipline, in citizenship, and in diversified academic experiences."

A special task force had been assigned the job of coming up with a philosophy and exploring how the middle school concept could work in Wilmington. The philosophy was revised several times, said West Intermediate Principal Jim Jordan, and is the result of a "true team effort." Jordan added that teachers in both schools had their first in-service day October 31 and, at that time, formed 10 committees to look at various aspects of the concept. The committees will involve teachers, students, parents, and administrators.

"The enthusiasm is just spreading," noted North Intermediate Principal Michael Tikonoff, who said it was important to empower teachers and let them share in the decision-making process. He said, too, that the students themselves were excited by the new student centered approach.

School committee members praised both principals for their hard work and made further suggestions on curriculum and discipline.

Schools at work on FY 91 budget

The Wilmington School Department is getting a jump on the fiscal 1991 budget according to School Supt. William Fay. Fay told school committee members last week he's already begun meeting with his directors. He said he asked them to bring him two budgets: one that is level-funded and one which would be realistic yet would maintain their programs. Fay added since the financial picture is bleak, he doesn't anticipate funding new programs or personnel next year.

Business Manager Peter DeRoeve said that building principals and department heads will begin budget discussions the first week in December and will report back to central office by December 15. A draft version of the school budget is due January 16, he said. Brad Jackson pointed out that the finance committee and town manager just need the school department's preliminary figures in January and not a final budget.

Parents urged to join effort against drugs

by Arlene Surprenant

Activist Anne Linehan urged parents to get more involved in an educational effort against chemical abuse at Wednesday's meeting of the Wilmington School Committee. In addition, Linehan criticized SADD's (Students Against Driving Drunk) concept of "responsible" drinking and asked school officials to properly train teachers in drug and alcohol programs before installing such curricula in the schools.

"I'm beginning to get very concerned about the parents of this nation. Where are they? A parent really has to look at his own attitudes," said Linehan. Dr. James Demos agreed with Linehan saying teachers are asked to do too much and parents should take some of the responsibility for keeping their children off drugs.

Linehan claimed SADD sends a "double message" to young people today and the SADD program is inappropriately sponsored by the beer industry. Members of the Wilmington High SADD disputed her claim saying they don't send a mixed message and they are opposed to any drug and alcohol use. Some of the members explained, that by joining SADD, they have made a difference and set a good example in fellow students' lives.

According to SADD advisor Stoddard Melhado, his students plan to sponsor a drug awareness week involving the entire community next April. Linehan said she would support the students in this endeavor.

Linehan told the school committee that in order to be eligible for further drug education grants, parents have to become involved in the effort and the committee has to evaluate the various curricula. Andrea Paglia said she would like to bring Linehan's informational packet to the attention of the Strategic Management Committe to see if a townwide fight against drugs and alcohol could be launched.

Committeeman Shirley Callan said school staff personnel should have been included in the evening's discussion.

Leaves, leaves and more leaves

The Wilmington recycling program has piled up some 250 tons of leaves at the recycling center off Old Main Street in South Wilmington. On Saturday, rubbish trucks picked up an additional 96 tons, with more being picked up by town DPW workers. Bill Flaherty and Joe Sciarappa of the DPW were at work last Saturday, emptying bags of leaves and piling them into rows of piles for composting. The recycling center is open on Saturdays from 9 to 4, accepting newspapers, glass bottles, aluminum cans and leaves.

On September 21, many members of the DelNinno and Melzar families were present to dedicate a bridge in Wilmington in memory of community activist Silvio DelNinno and former town manager and public office holder Harold Melzar. Also in attendance were State Rep. James R. Miceli (D-Wilmington); Selectmen Michael McCoy and Chester Bruce to dedicate the new Silvio V. DelNinno - Harold E. Melzar Bridge formerly known as the Lake Street Bridge.

Tewksbury Lions Club "leftovers" sent to the Middlesex Shelter

by Bill Conlon

Sometimes it pays to be in the right place at the right time. And a talent for using the telephone doesn't hurt, either.

Last week, I received a call from Tewksbury Public Health Director Bill McMenimen, who stated that the Tewksbury Lions Club had a lot of frozen chicken left over from the Homecoming Weekend. The Lions Club had bought hundreds of pounds of chicken for their fund-raising barbeque, but the Saturday of the Homecoming was so hot that food sales were off across the board.

The frozen chicken was brought to Giovanni's Bakery in Chelmsford, there to be kept by Lion's Club past president Denis Toscano.

Bill McMenimen remembered that I volunteer every year with the free Christmas dinner offered by Christ Church United in Lowell, and asked if I knew of a good place to send the frozen chicken. I said I didn't, since the church offers Christmas dinner only, but I told him I'd get back to him soon.

A few months back, Lowell City Manager James Campbell spoke at a Communion breakfast held at St. William's Church in Tewksbury, and I was covering the presentation for this newspaper. In the course of his speech, Campbell spoke well of the Middlesex Shelter, and how that worthy organization was always in need of donations. Bingo!

On Friday I called the Shelter and asked if they could use some frozen chicken. They were delighted, and said that 150 to 170 people are fed twice a day at the Shelter, and that meat is difficult to buy on a limited budget. I told them I'd call back, and quickly phoned Bill McMenimen to square away the details.

The health director provided me with the address and phone number of the bakery where the chicken was stored, and said that the Lions Club needed only a letter about the gift, for tax purposes. That information was relayed to the Shelter, and the wheels were set in motion.

On Tuesday morning a truck came by the bakery to pick up 225 pounds of frozen chicken for the homeless people living at Middlesex Shelter, all courtesy of the Tewksbury Lions Club. Supply met demand.

Isn't it amazing what can be done with a few telephone calls, on a slow Friday at work?

Tree Talk

by Mike DiGiorgio
When pruning rosebushes, first cut away the dead and diseased wood. Prune all dead canes flush with the bud union. Prune wounded branches below the injury to the point where the pith is white and healthy. Weak or spindly branches should be cut next. Be sure that the middle of the plant is open enough to let in sunshine and allow the air to freely circulate. It is best to leave three or four of the strongest canes on the plant. Never leave short stumps which may create an entryway for insects and disease. All cuts should be made at a 45-degree angle about 1/4 inch above a bud and sloping down away from it.

Tech honors two as 'exemplary teachers'

Maureen Oliver of Somerville, a business technology instructor and Peter Quirk of Dracut, a science teacher have been chosen for the annual Exemplary Teachers of the Year award at Shawsheen Tech.

Shawsheen faculty and administration will gather with Minuteman Tech staff at Masonic Lodge, Lexington Monday, Nov. 27 to site the accomplishments of this year's honored teachers from both schools.

Oliver teaches office procedures, machine transcription, word processing and keyboarding to Shawsheen students, but believes enhancing a student's personal attributes is the most improtant aspect of her teaching.

A graduate of Salem State College, she earned a masters in educational administration from Boston State College and studied in a Certificate of Advanced Studies program at Boston University. In her 25 years as a teacher, she has been teaching at Shawsheen Tech for 14 years.

Quirk teaches physics and chemistry as a member of the science department at the Tech. He received his bachelor and master of science degrees in chemical engineering from Lowell Institute of Technology, now ULowell.

He says he believes students give only what you ask for - I try to ask for a little more.

Both Quirk and Oliver expressed surprise and pride when chosen by their peers for the Exemplary Teacher honor. "There are many wonderful teachers who have devoted their careers to students and I don't think I'm unusual, "Oliver says. "I realize the selection must have been tough," adds Quirk, "there are a lot of good teachers here."

An Open Letter To The People of Wilmington

Dear friends,

I would like to take this opportunity to explain my position to the voters and residents of the Town of Wilmington.

In my 2½ years of public service as a Selectman, I have always attempted to conduct myself with the utmost respect for all citizens' rights. Whatsoever my position was on an issue, I took a stand to voice an opinion that I thought was best for the Town and its citizens.

During this time, I have served no special interest, nor have I catered to the whims of a few. I used my best judgement to insure that a vote, or a stance on a particular issue reflected what I perceived to be the most advantageous position for the Town. Whatever the popularity or impopularity of the cause, I never shirked my duty nor did I try to conceal my position from the voters.

Recently, an unfortunate and regrettable incident occurred between myself and Selectman Cain. I was engaged in a fight by Mr. Cain who subjected me first to verbal assaults and then to physical contact, necessitating an unavoidable response on my part. I had no other choice or option.

Whatever rumors, innuendo or gossip may exist about this incident, my position was only to defend myself upon the sudden, unprovoked attack by Mr. Cain.

I will not allow misinformation, distortions, or untruths about this incident to drive me from public office.

I am prepared to defend myself and my actions of last Monday night in whatever the forum. I welcome the opportunity as I always have, to let my side of the story be exposed fully to public view and scrutiny, letting the chips fall where they may.

By the same token, Mr. Cain's actions will also be judged by the same audience as will mine. I am completely comfortable with the fact that the voters will determine the appropriateness of my actions Monday night.

Finally, I have always been judged by the voters in my public positions. There is no difference now. I willingly and enthusiastically submit my cause to the voters confident of the quality and soundness of their judgement in my behalf.

That being the case, I will continue to serve the voters and residents of the Town unaffected and unhampered by this regrettable incident.

Sincerely,

Michael V. McCoy

McCoy helped into office

by Capt. Larz Neilson

In Wilmington for the past few days the voters have been offered opportunities to sign petitions asking that Selectman Mike McCoy be unseated, as a Wilmington selectman. The writer did not sign.

Mike McCoy, like many others in Wilmington, has been the victim of one JM, that guy in the state legislature. It is a story that goes back over 30 years, and Mike has the writer's sympathy.

He was elected because JM has a big list of names, for favors done, and he calls upon those names when he wants favors. There was nothing in particular that Mike had ever done to be deserved of his being elected, but he did have JM for an uncle, and JM had pulled out all the stops.

The one item that this writer noticed, when Mike was being sworn in as a selectman was the look on his father's face.

Sad faced. That was the description. His father looked,his eyes sort of drooping. He shook his head and said nothing.

Ronnie McCoy exchanged glances with the writer, and again he shook his head.

About 25 years ago JM was appointed to the Wilmington Planning Board. That is the beginning of a story, all of which, in repeated instances, would have the same tale to tell.

The six persons on the planning board were generally about equal in ability. One of the more prominent persons was a farmer named Bob Evans, a level-headed semi-loquacious Yankee, an egg farmer.

About every other, or every third meeting JM would start a fight with Bob Evans. The fight generally started at about 11 p.m. at the time when the members were preparing to go home.

What JM had to say the writer does not remember. It didn't sound impressive. Of course it would be reported in the paper, because the writer was there to report what went on at the meeting.

And that, one can guess, was the reason JM engaged in those fights. He wanted the "people" to know that there was someone who was fighting for them. There was one member of the planning board who didn't take "orders" and who was willing to fight the "establishment."

Those thoughts did not occur to the writer at that time.

Then JM became a selectman.

Wavie Drew was a selectman, and sometimes the chairman. Wavie was a widow and a Gold Star mother. She used to walk all over Wilmington every year, collecting a dollar at each home for the Wilmington Community Fund. Wavie Drew, the chairman of the Wilmington Republican Town Committee, had the respect of every person in Wilmington.

JM, too, was a Republican. About once in two or three weeks or so in the selectmen's meeting he would engage in a fight with Wavie. There was no explaining it, except to say that JM was again demonstrating that he was not taking orders from anyone.

Fred Cain represented Wilmington in the state legislature at that time, and JM started running against Fred. Fred, it seemed, was unbeatable.

The writer does not recall the circumstances, but JM decided to shift political parties. JM, the Republican who was representing Wilmington in the Republican conventions ir Worcester and Springfield went down to the Town Hall and enrolled as a Democrat. He called upon the writer to take a picture, which was published.

It was after that, with Fred Cain on the deceased list, and JM a Democrat that he was able to get elected to the state legislature. He has been there ever since, and, in his subtle manner, the people of Wilmington have been able to learn about the rise of JM in the state house.

JM is the assistant majority leader in the house, and the vice chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. If anyone gets a letter from JM one or other of those facts will be on the outside of the State House envelope. That guy must be an important person!

Talk with persons who are in the State House and the picture is not the same. JM, the word is, is a "back bencher," not a leader.

But he hadn't been long in the legislature before he engaged in a fight with speaker of the House, Mr. McGee from Lynn. Probably the reason was the old one -- McGee was the most prominent person in the House.

Last year, he engaged in a fight with the Governor -- this before it became fashionable to do so. It was just JM's habit, one could say.

JM put on a great show about working in the State House. He would see to it that the home town people knew of it.

Jobs and favors. That was his strong point. Jobs and favors, and publicity, favorable publicity.

He began to build up his own political constituency. His file index on favors done was the basis.

Did someone in Wilmington, or in Tewksbury want to become a member of the school committee or the board of selectmen? JM with his card index of voters could be of help, and would, under the proper understanding.

JM was building up, for himself, a coterie of town officials, all of whom basked in his light, and all of whom, it was to be hoped, would be a part of his political team.

Thus it was that JM's eyes were attracted to his nephew, Mike McCoy.

Mike, as a young man had worked for Big Joe LaCreta. He had learned the ins and outs of the pizza business. Now he has his own shop on Lowell Street.

JM saw to it that Mike was appointed to the Planning Board of Wilmington. The writer took no special note of the event.

There would be occasions, few and far between, when the writer would report on Wilmington Planning Board meetings. He would see McCoy, seated there, saying nothing.

It was in the second year that the clue emerged. McCoy issued a public statement, saying that he was not going to be a candidate for selectman at that time.

Huh? One could, but didn't do so very much, wonder at such a statement.

Then in his third year McCoy was a candidate for selectman, and good ol' JM pulled out the stops, in messages to the people of Wilmington, about whom they should cast their vote.

It was a strong vote. There were surprised persons at the time the candidates were sworn in.

Mike has been under JM's thumb ever since. You can almost feel sorry for him.

commentary

Where is the outrage?

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington residents, it seems, have developed a ho-hum attitude about the recent incident between selectmen Bob Cain and Michael McCoy. As might be expected, a few of our more politically active citizens are taking sides and jumping in either to excuse Selectman McCoy's behavior or to deplore the beating suffered by the chairman of the board. But a surprisingly large number of residents fed up with local politics are simply sitting back and washing their hands of the whole sorry state of affairs. These residents feel a fight was long overdue between the two political factions in this town. They feel each side had done plenty in the past to egg each other on and lead up to the eruption of emotion at town hall last week.

What seems to be missing is any sense of outrage that an elected official resorted to physical violence resulting in pain and suffering for another human being. Michael McCoy was voted into office to serve the people. Wilmington citizens were ill-served when he chose to settle a dispute with his fists.

There is no excuse for such cowardly behavior. Whether provoked or not, no public figure should intentially lay in wait for another individual and deliver the kinds of blows which were delivered to Selectman Cain. Politics should be laid aside in this instance and all citizens should be up in arms demanding, at the very least, an apology to Mr. Cain and the public at large.

Instead, a smokescreen has been thrown up. Mr. McCoy has dragged his powerful uncle, Rep. James Miceli, into the fray and put out word that the chairman was under the influence and swung first, something those of us in attendance at Monday's meeting find hard to believe. As of today, Mr. McCoy had not yet issued a statement to Wilmington police and police have pretty much allowed the selectman to walk away, perhaps thinking the matter will be properly handled in court. Selectman McCoy should have set an example as a public figure and gone right to the police of his own accord to set the record straight. And Mr. Miceli, as a state representative, should have cooperated with the police in this matter.

The whole incident played out in local media for the past week has been an embarrassment for this town. This was not politics. This was a disturbing act of violence that must not be excused or condoned. In the future, serious-minded citizens need to look carefully at the motivations, temperaments, and emotional stability of candidates before electing or returning them to office for another term.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

It has recently come to my attention, from several sources, that the word around town is that I am moving out of Tewksbury and will therefore not be a candidate for re-election to the school committee. This is most definitely not the case. I have no intention of moving now or in the future and I will be seeking re-election in April.

Thank you for the opportunity to set the record straight.

Sincerely,
Donna M. Colella

Dear Larz:

With the various points made by commentators, editorials and letters to the editor, I took exception to one point made by Mr. Fitzgerald.

Agreeing with his point of view regarding discussion as the means to resolve an issue I offer this letter rather than seeking him out in order to "knock his block off."

I believe he is half right in stating the individuals involved owe an apology. What I don't believe is a rationale for Mr. Cain. Should he apologize for acceding to Mr. McCoy's request for a private discussion? Or should he apologize for inadvertantly placing his face in the way of McCoy's fist?

Carl Backman

Open letter to residents of Tewksbury:

Re: Zoning Board and Building Department allegations.

Over the past several months, the Merrimack Valley Advertiser has relentlessly printed numerous articles and letters attacking the Building Department and the Board of Appeals. Supporting the Advertisers stand have been people like Thomas Camara of 5 Washington St., Tewksbury, one ride by his property, bearing in the mind that he claims it's now all cleaned up, will tell the story.

His attack on the Building Department and its employees was solely based on his having been cited for debris on his property. He maintains discrimination and selective enforcement because everyone else guilty of the same crime has not brought to justice prior to him. The law and the courts seek the matter differently. Fortunately we can only catch and prosecute one at a time and he was not the first, but it was his time.

Mr. Camara, like the Merrimack Valley Advertiser, has a double set of standards. He forbids and denies the Town or anyone else the right to enter upon his property however, he continuously violates his neighbors' the town's and other town residents rights by trespassing upon their lands to take pictures. Perhaps he really does have more rights than the rest of us.

The Merrimack Valley Advertiser's heavy handed articles on the evil Appeals Board who customarily grant appeals to families with needs to take care of elderly family members and other such circumstances and the Advertiser was also quick to point out that variances should never be issued for profit are a mortal crime and that no variances should even be issued for hardships under any circumstances.

Well good folks of Tewskbury, here's the rub, that good old double set of standards for you. The Merrimack Valley Advertiser a profit making organization, made no qualms back in December of 1985 when it went before the Board of Appeals, asked for and was granted a variance to expend their building and parking lot. Who would ever think for a moment that they were carrying a grudge against the Building Department for not supporting that variance Ha Ha Ha.

Well now some of the truth is out and the residents of this town can see how the Advertiser has played us all for fools taking big double scoops of appeals for themselves and then insisting that the rest of us should get nothing. How can you thank them and show them your distain for this despicable behavior? I, for one, will not trade with anyone who advertises in that newspaper. This will hurt them in their pocketbooks as advertisers realize it's a bad deal to advertise with them.

Dear Larz:

Any objective study would find that the quest for the "macho" image is essentially right wing, puritanical, cowardly, and has an element of the secret fear of the self and public image. It is certainly Philistine. When our former president on his weekend off dressed like a cowboy it was both a measure of his insecurity and an effort to please the public and play on that macho image admired by the Philistines. His "photo opportunity" looked like a model for the L.L. Bean catalog.

All the propaganda projected by "The Marlboro Man," John Wayne, "Rambo," and Ronald Reagan I find to be a damned bore. Meanwhile we bemoan the poor educational achievements of our youth when compared to other major nations.

Money is masculinity therefore woman's work is not as valuable or paid for as well as men. Beer is masculine. Drinking is another assertion of misplaced manliness. The American outpouring of beer commercials on all TV sports events tells every male from an early age that beer and sports are "macho."

Guns are "macho" hunting game is particularly masculine, birds a bit less so, but higher on the social scale. Motorcycle worshipers are super "macho" particularly when dressed in leather with a docile "cyclemate chick" hanging on behind.

Boxing and wrestling are the ultimate accepted masculine expressions of "macho" aggressiveness and probably the sports furthest removed from the intellect. But these sports at least have rules, regulations, time and place that keep them within the bounds of civilization.

My point of all this is that a fair number of our "be a man" males are not far out of the cave. When an aggressive, "macho," divorces himself completely from his intelligence, training and education, "be a man" becomes dominant, reason, experience, and education goes by the board. He closes his fists, takes a giant leap backward in time, assaults another person and thereby returns to the cave.

I find such events rather discouraging as we near the 21st century of this segment of time and evolution that we call "A.D."

Your local curmudgeon
George L. Webster

Dear Larz:

On behalf of the Wilmington Home and School Association, I would like to thank Mr. James Jordan and Mr. Michael Tikonoff for their interesting and informative presentation on the Middle School at our meeting last evening.

Their information on the key ingredients for a successful Middle School, on the empowerment of teachers and administrators, on the philosophy, which was adopted the previous evening by the school committee, and on the task force which they chair was thorough and interesting. Their presentation addressed all the areas of parental concern. They were eager for input and most gracious about sharing their experiences thus far in the process.

There is room for parental input on several key committees: student issues, student transition programs, parental involvement, and student handbook. We urge parents to watch for notices concerning these committees. Become involved. Have a say in your child's future education.

Once again, thank you Mr. Jordan and Mr. Tikonoff. We wholeheartedly support your efforts.

Before closing, we would be remiss if we did not mention that both principals credit the administration of Mr. William Fay with providing the support and leadership that has enabled them to progress to this extend in their planning.

Peggy Kane
Secretary

Dear Larz:

I'm sorry, but I can't resist this opportunity to write about Mr. Hefty. After all, it was he who labled me a "coward" for writing in one town and living in another.

It's been a while since I've been in a fight, but you can bet that if I were to attempt such an action, it would be against a more formidable opponent than a 55-year old man with his arm in a sling. (Editor's note: Bob Cain had his arm in a cast, but it was removed about three weeks ago.)

What's that you say, Mike, he threw the first punch? You are accusing a man who has years of public service to the town, who is a respected businessman in the community, a family man and a grandfather, of throwing the first punch at you? If you do happen to dance you way out of this, Mike, who will your next opponent be -- Mother Teresa?

Just for laughs, lets pretend we were the proverbial fly on the wall. Let's listen in on the Monday night flight of Michael McCoy to the Miceli estate.

Mike rushes up to the door and starts banging on it fiercely. (He's had a lot of practice doing that sort of thing.) He's crying "Uncle Jim, Uncle Jim, let me in, Uncle Jim."

Uncle Jim waddles to the door and opens it to find a huffing, puffing fugitive from a donut factory. Jim looks and says, "Do I know you?"

With a deep breath, Mike says, "They're after me, Uncle Jim. You've got to help me."

"What did you do this time?" Jim asks.

"It's not what I did, Uncle Jim, it's what Bob Cain did to me," said Mike.

"What happened? What did he do?" Jim inquired.

"Uncle Jim, Bob tried to break my fist with his face. I tried to defend myself against his attack, but he hit my fist again and again until he fell to the floor, bleeding and exhausted. After that I jumped in my car (poor car) and here I am."

"I know just what to do," said Uncle Jim. "Tell the newspaper people what you told me, then call your lawyer and tell him that same story. Then ask him about the possibilities of 1) the prospect of an insanity defense and 2) the chances of me legally renouncing you as a relative."

Do a politician's actions reflect the true nature of the people who support him, both politically and financially, in a election and in his tenure in office? Is the Board of Selectmen designed to prevent disputes among its citizens, or should we just start calling the town hall "King Arthurs II"? Should a Board of Selectmen be politically manipulated to serve the wishes of one state representative, to have his endorsees abuse the political trust, to allow such endorsees to intimidate political foes, and to show total disreguard for the earned respect of its more mature and intelligent members?

Finally, 10 months ago, Michael V. McCoy accused me of being a "cheap shot artist". He claimed I was a "coward", and a "rat" for exercising my right of opinion on my observations of his past T.V. appearances at selectmen's meetings. I was verbally assaulted by Michael V. McCoy in front of my home, and in letters to the Town Crier. He later claimed justification for his actions. I have family and friends who are affected by this brain-dead individual. It's time for Miceli to pull back the reins on his "jack-ass" nephew, and put him back in his stall. Save the town the additional embarrassment of a recall, and suggest a more fitting occupation for your idiot nephew, like being a doorman at Tewksbury State.

One last question for yah Mike. Who's the real coward now ?

The sleepers must awaken !

Signed
Frederick S. Stone

Attorney James "Jay" Gaffney, III, chairman of the Tewksbury Historical Commission, outlines the history of the Jonathan Clark homestead on Andover Street, built in 1746. Garden club meets Nov. 30

Did you know the best time to mulch your garden is when the ground has crusted with the first hard frost?

Did you know dumping leaves in those way out locations may be obstructing natural water ways now or in the spring?

Whether your interests are horticulture, conservation, civic or home beautification there is something for everyone at the Wilmington Garden Club.

If you are a Wilmington resident looking for an affordable way to challenge your interests, meet new people and make new friends call Judi Johnston, 657-4766 or go to the next meeting at the Fourth of July Headquarters across from the Wilmington common, Thursday, November 30 at 7:30 p.m.

Following the business meeting will be Eileen Flaherty, Conservation Administrator for the Town of Wilmington, speaking on Wetlands Protection and Conservation: an overview.

Thank you

Just a short note to say thank you for the cards and personal calls that I received this past week. They certainly help the days pass more quickly. Your expressions of concerns are greatly appreciated.

Shawsheen School

On Thursday, November 16 parents visited their children's classroom for National Education Week. PAC presented all teachers with a corsage to show their appreciation in all they do for the children at Shawsheen. Later that day there was an assembly for Mr. Arsenault. Students and faculty were given an opportunity to say a final goodbye to a very special man:

At the monthly PAC meeting Mrs. Quinn spoke to parents about the school system's food service program. Also, PAC decided to reward the students for the success of the candy bar drive by passing out Hoodsies to afternoon kindergarten students on Tuesday, Nov. 21 and the rest of the students on Wednesday, Nov. 22. Again, thanks for all your hard work. Money was donated from PAC funds so the museum pass could once again be purchased. The next PAC meeting won't be until Monday, January 8, 1990 at 7:30 p.m. in the school cafetorium.

Thanksgiving was celebrated early in kindergarten this year. The children and teachers have been busy planning a small concert and feast for the parents. Mrs. Murphy's classes celebrated on Monday, Nov. 20 and Mrs. Graham's classes celebrated on Tuesday, Nov. 21. The children sang songs and had a feast from turkey to homemade corn bread.

Happy Thanksgiving to all!

Correction: Grade one will be going to McDonald's for breakfast, then off to see "The Nutcracker," at the Wang Center in Boston on Wednesday, Nov. 29, not Nov. 23.

Upcoming events: Comedy Night is Friday, Dec. 1 at the Sons of Italy Hall in Wilmington. Doors open at 8 p.m. Tickets are on sale.

Santa's Secret Workshop's dates have been changed from December 5-7 to December 13-15. More details to follow.

North Intermediate School

The PAC meeting on November 14 was very well attended. Mrs. Arnold gave an excellent presenation about our exciting library/media center. Technology applications at the library were highlighted in a very informative manner. Parents were also made aware of our need to remove outdated materials from our shelves. Several parents will be volunteering to help with this important project. Those would like to help are asked to call the school.

Parents also had an opportunity to view a series of videotapes entitled "A Case for Middle Schools." This was part of the ongoing attempt to inform paarents regarding the nature of the changes which are occurring in the intermediate schools.

On November 21 the students at the North will have the pleasure of viewing Nasa's Education-Space Program presentation. There will be two assemblies 10 and 11 a.m. Parents are invited to attend this very exciting presentation. Please refrain from taking younger siblings.

Report cards will be going home on Wednesday, November 22. Card envelope should be returned, signed, by November 27.

Thanksgiving Day football game tickets are on sale at the North Monday and Tuesday for the WHS/Tewksbury game. Students $3 and adults $5. All tickets purchased at the game will be $5.

The entire staff at the North wishes everyone a happy Thanksgiving Holiday.

Woburn Street School

We hope the parents enjoyed the opportunity to see their child at work in their classrooms as part of National Education Week last Thursday, November 16.

Woburn Street Crier, first edition, has been published and was a rousing success. Children from all grades were encouraged to contribute stories and poems. We ran a spooky contest. The winners were Kim Carroll, grade three, Miss Oja and Lori Vachon, grade two, Mrs. Lynch.

The third grade music classes are excited about attending a live performance of "Babes in Toyland" November 29 at the John Hancock Hall in Boston. We also will be visiting the John Hancock Observatory.

This year the PAC has expressed an interest in doing something for the community. A "Papa Gino's Night" has been set up with the proceeds to benefit the "Barrows Cultural Center" located at Wilmington High school. The PAC voted to donate all proceeds to this worthwhile community venture. All parents and townspeople will have access to this center which will be a source of pride and a community resource. Papa Gino's Night will be: Monday, Dec. 18 from 5 to 10 p.m. Please mark the date on your calender and join us in helping this worthwhile cause.

Our next meeting will be Tuesday, Dec. 5 at 9:30 a.m. at the cafeteria. We will be making a holiday craft item with Lori Hart. Babysitting is available, so don't miss it.

We want to wish you all a happy Thanksgiving.

Wildwood School

Kindergarten students of Mrs. Marrano and Mrs. Waters are busy preparing the food for their traditional Thanksiving feast which the parents are invited to attend on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The upcoming events happening at the school are bake sale/raffle on December 5. The raffle drawing is to be held in the afternoon. Santa's Secret Shop will be held December 6 and 7. The Santa's Secret Shop is an opportunity for the students to purchase holiday gifts with the aid of parent volunteers. More specific information will be provided to the children soon.

The PAC wishes everyone a Happy Thanksgiving.

West Intermediate School

Reminder: The next PAC meeting is November 30 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. All parents are welcome. There will be a half day of school on Wednesday, Nov. 22. No lunches will be served. Intermediate students will be released at 11:30 a.m.

On Monday, Safety Officer Bobby Shelley conducted a film presentation on bus safety for all grade levels.

On November 16, all seventh grade students and 21 parent chaperones enjoyed an outing to the New England Aquarium in Boston.

On November 15, eighth graders were treated to two drama performances. As part of the school's Drama Festival, students in homerooms 201 and 207 put on two plays: Dracula Returns and Eat, Drink and Be Scary. A good time was had by all.

Project Enterprise

Students in Project Enterprise have recently completed a unit of study dealing with Greek and Roman Mythology. Students completed research papers on a particular God or Goddess. Pupils also wrote an original myth dealing with a problem or invention in the 20th century.

Topics from the greenhouse effect to bubble gum were creatively written using basic characteristics of mythology. Many of the myths were highly serious, some were whimsical in nature. Students will be filmed next week reading their myths and sharing information gathered in their research.

Grade six students have begun filming their own video entitled "Creative Encounters with famous People." Students have researched famous people living and deceased and will present a 20/20 type show format. Students have designed the studio sets and all questions used in their interviews. Some students will dress in costumes for their interviews.

Note: We appreciate the influx of school news from all schools. Copy may be submitted to the Town Crier office by Monday evenings or you may call Arlene Surprenant at 658-5696. Happy Thanksgiving everyone.

Tewksbury school news

Trahan School

It seems like such a short time ago that we were all getting ready for the new school year. It is hard to believe that the first marking period has closed and report cards will be going home November 22.

Trahan School staff and students are involved in many building-wide and classroom activities.

Happygrams are delivered to students every other week. Two students from each class, based on the recommendation of their classroom teacher, are recognized for good citizenship, improved achievement and other notable behaviors.

If you go to the Trahan School Monday between 10:15 and 10:30 a.m. or Thursday from 1:45 to 2 p.m., don't be surprised at how quiet it may be. Everybody is involved in our D.E.A.R. program. Our Drop Everything and Read is a sustained silent reading program. Students select their students

All classes at Trahan are preparing a short poem, song, choral reading or skit to present to classmates on Wednesday, Nov. 22 Goals are to help children to understand meaning and history of the holiday, to practice the communication and skills of listening, speaking, reading and writing which are taught in their classes and to build self esteem and condfidence in all students.

During November 13-18, the Trahan School celebrated American Education Week and Book Week. Parents visited classes on Tueday, Nov. 14 and Wednesday, Nov. 15 to observe children involved in their learning activities. This week, we also celebrated Book Week. Students had the opportunity to design a book mark which promoted reading. Each class had a winner selected. All book marks are on display at school.

Our Parent Advisory Council has been very active since the start of the school year. Current projects include collecting pennies for the playground, distributing orders from a very successful fund raising drive, sponsoring a food drive for the needy and sponsoring a teacher to attend a workshop on Attention Disorders. Plans are underway to offer Santa's Secret Workshop which children can purchase holiday gifts. The PAC has presented the Reading Magician and has planned other programs for the students.

Mrs. Krueger's and Mrs. Feick's kindergarten classes have been visited by the children in Mrs. Dias' and Ms. Santos' classes. They visited several times each month for the purpose of shared reading experiences. Each kindergarten child has a third or fourth grade buddy who shares a piece of literature with them. The students are enjoying the project.

The children in Mrs. Lodi's Transitional class will be writing and illustrating books. Two class books which are currently being worked on by the students are The Very Hungry Turkey and Orange Turkey, Orange Turkey, What Do You See? The children read many books and made book markers in honor of National Chilren's Book Week. The students are sorting and classifying in conjunction with their math program and will graph their favorite Thanksgiving pies. Mrs. Lodi's students are sturying about the life of the Pilgrims and will play some Indian and Pilgrim games.

Grade one students work cooperatively together as they prepare their songs and poetry for Trahan School's Thanksgiving program. Grade two students are quite excited as they prepare for their part in the Thanksgiving program. Each child will recite a seasonal poem and all will join to sing "Over the River and Through the Woods."

The third grade students are being instructed on Aids awareness by Mr. Sal Gallo. Each class meets with him once each week for four consecutive weeks. The children are awaiting their field trip to the Collins Center in Andover for a presentation of "A Christmas Carol." Grade three students are preparing the poem, A Good Thanksgiving for our school assembly.

Grade four students are also working to memorize their contribution to our holiday assembly. They will recite the poem, "The First Thanksgiving Day." They will be joining the third grade as they travel to the Collins Center on November 30. The Electric Light Company of New England will be visiting the fourth grade classes to present a two part lesson on electricity and safety. Students have been sharpening their spelling skills as they prepare for a class spelling bee. This always proves to add a bit of lively competition.

Heathbrook

It's been a busy fall for the students and staff of the Heath Brook School. The P.A.C. sponsored its annual major fundraiser, and to the delight of all, it was an unqualified success. Thanks to the efforts of the students and parents, the P.A.C. will now be able to provide the classrooms with educational materials, instructional aids, programs, and educational computer software. Given the recent cutbacks in education, this fundraiser has been rendered all the more important.

In October, the P.A.C. sponsored a Halloween play entitled "The Haunted House." The performers toured the primary classrooms, giving the children demonstrations in costuming and makeup. A spooky time was had by all.

Once again, under the direction of reading specialist Sue LaChance, the Heath Brook School is participating in the Book-it program. This program, in conjunction with Pizza Hut, encourages students to read books. After a sufficient number of books has been read, children are given coupons which can be redeemed for personal size pizzas.

Also in October, the third grade classes with their teachers Mrs. Fiske, Mrs. Durate, and Ms. Hassan, went apple picking and wre given demonstrations on making apple cider and apple sauce. Everyone had a great time In December, these same classes will be boarding the bus to Boston for a morning performance of the classic Christmas story "The Nutcracker."

In the spirit of the Thanksgiving holiday, the first grade classes of Mrs. Martyzsak, Mrs. Hennemuth, Ms. King and Mrs.LaMotte are busy donating non-perishable foods for Project Awareness, an outreach program designed to help provide needed nourishment to those less fortunate. The children are eagerly and diligently working on this project.

Once again, with guidance of the fourth grade teacher Mrs. Kalarites, the children are hard at work preparing for the first edition of the Heath Brook School newspaper. All students have been encouraged to write articles, create puzzles and drawings, conduct surveys, and use their imagination for another fun and fact filled copy coming "hot off the presses" in late November.

Miss Krainski, the computer room supervisor, has been busy organizing the Heath Brook School computer room and soliciting donations for floppy disks, software, hardware, and many other materials needed for the proper utilization of the computer room. The Heath Brook School children are also busy collecting Stop & Shop register receipts which can be redeemed for educational computer software. Although there are no Stop & Shop stores in close proximity to Tewksbury, we are asking friends and relatives to help us in this worthy endeavor.

On November 28, 29 and 30, the Heath Brook P.A.C. will once again be sponsoring Santa's Secret Workshop, a mini-store in which children can purchase a holiday gift for a special friend or relative. This year's P.A.C. officers include Jill and Rich Palmer and Barbara and Jim Duffy as co-chairpersons, Cathy Tighe as treasruer, Debbie Verrochio as secretary, Debbie Rauseo as hospitality coordinator, and Leslie Carr as publicity coordinator.

TJHS

Tewksbury Junior High School opened its doors to parental visitors during American Education Week, November 13-17, 1989. Almost two dozen parents availed themselves of this opportunity to observe the educational process in action. All were complimentary. They liked what they saw. The staff and administration were pleased to host such visitors, giving everyone an opportunity to see what you pay for.

On Wednesday, November 15, the administration sponsored a special spelling bee featuring the five winners from each fifth grade classroom against a team of celebrity challengers. The youngsters did very well even at their tender age to withstand the experienced challenge of the distinguished visitors.

In the end, Charles Lyons, superintendent/director at Shawsheen Tech spelled his way to the winning trophy. Mrs. Josephine Campo, secretary in the superintendent's office, was the runner-up. Other representatives for the challengers were Mr. William Hurton, selectman; Jr. Jay Kelley, selectman, and Mr. William Emerson, school committee, who graciously substituted for Rep. James Miceli (tied up on budget matters at the State House).

The students who showed so much poise in standing up to this gigantic challenge were:

William MacBrien, room 221, Mrs. O'Sullivan; Nick Amato, room 223, Mrs. Gropman; Michelle McGrath, room 206, Mr. Kearney; Kim Zunino, room 220, Mr. Jardin; Kristy Zajac, room 222, Ms. Sacramone.

Hopefully, these adults in the community will become even bigger supporters of educational pursuits and will be encouraged to enlist more financial resources of education within our community. Programs such as this one should help convince community leaders that our best investment is the education of our young people. That was the message of American Education Week.

(This program was videotaped and will be shown at a later date on Cable Channel 43.)

Career opportunities wide-open in real estate

If you are a college-bound high school junior or senior, you've already started visiting colleges and pondering the career choices open to you. The decision you make now will have a major impact upon your future. "For energetic imaginative and bright young individuals, real estate is one area where fortunes still can be made, and at the same time, good done for the community," says David W. O'Neil, GRI, president of Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors. "Seldom does one have the opportunity in a vocation to combine private gain with public benefaction," he continued. The members of the Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors would like to offer the following information on the field of real estate in the 1990s.

To many young people, real estate is simply somebody selling a house. That may be what the average consumer sees due to the extensive advertising necessary to bring homebuyers and sellers together, but real estate is much more. The real estate industry is a huge business encompassing a variety of specialty services.

The field of financing is a large and complex component of the real estate industry. Whether specializing in financing, as in the case of a mortgage banker, or simply offering prospective property owners the best information possible, real estate entrepreneurs must understand available loans, their variable interest rates and loan periods.

Appraisal is another high specialized field offering a rewarding future for interested young people. Appraisers must have thorough knowledge of the principles underlying land use, urban growth, financing, construction, architecture, taxation and zoning. Years ago, appraisers learned their jobs by doing. Today, college courses are offered in appraisal work so that a student now has accurate knowledge of the field upon graduation and is ready to start immediately.

Real estate counseling is a growing field due to the increasing complexity of the real estate industry. The counselor advises clients whether land will best be used for shopping mall, a resort development or an industrial park. Counselors are employed by buyers, sellers, developers, visitors - any potential participant in a real estate transaction. There are additional areas of real estate specialities open to young people entering the business world, each with professional organizations in place which provide continued educational and professional support.

For instance, the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, has nine affiliated institutes, societies and councils, each focusing on a different aspect of real estate.

Men and women skilled in these areas have a tremendous opportunity to be of service to the community as well as to advance themselves financially. Members of the Eastern Middlesex Board of Realtors are frequently called upon to serve in important positions on civic boards, planning commissions and task forces which have a lasting impact on community development.

With large cities expanding their suburban seams and new industries dotting the countryside, the need for trained people in the real estate field is continuous. "I can think of no other profession which allows young people to carve out a more satisfying career than in real etaste," said O'Neil. Invest in your future - talk to your high school guidance counselor or consult academic college catalogs for information about a career in real estate.

Strategic planning helps town identify long-range goals

Strategic planning and management is program to make a municipal organization effective in identifying and achieving long range priority goals. Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski recently told the directors of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce about the program.

The Wilmington system of planning and management began in 1988. A top level committee of elected and management officials designed the local system, which is a guide for all local officials. It focuses on five major future oriented issues, and establishes a plan for action. Involved are top community leaders and five implementation teams.

The selected issues are:

1. How to maintain financial strength, despite pressures.

2. How to preserve small town ambiance, despite burgeoning traffic and heavy industrial and commercial development. Local zoning, site controls and open space purchases have not been able to stop the tide.

3. How best to accommodate a slowly growing elementary school population.

4. How to facilitate development of skills and motivation in town committees, to achieve superior performance.

The program was managed by a Strategic Management Committee (SMC). On that committee were the town manager, moderator, school superintendent and the chairs of the school committee, selectmen, planning board and finance committee. Assisting were the assistant town manager and a specialist from the MMA consulting group in Boston.

The SMC is about to be modified to change the role of the school committee and the selectmen. Those boards will be represented by the superintendent and the town manager. Approval of those two boards will be obtained before carrying out the first two phases of the annual update of the Strategic Management Plan.

The process has been kept simple. The participants are trained in concepts and responsibilities in two workshops. The SMC drafted and approved a mission statement for the town organization, and two temporary committees gave the SMC reports on strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats to be expected in the future. All departments were asked to recommend top priority issues.

The SMC selected the issues listed above. A task force was formed of appropriate staff members, with school personnel being included in all groups. A strategy and implementation plan was formed for each issue and summarized. An executive summary was given to all town participants.

The town manager and the school superintendent are coaching each task force and each department head, to develop a work program which is in support of the short term plan for the longer term strategies.

The SMC is to closely monitor and support each task force, and a simple process for updating the Strategic Management Plan.

Benefits which have emerged are:

Closer working relationships; top officials are now focused on a limited number of long term issues; a new team approach, with commitment to the strategies and accountability for specific term contributions by departments.

There are difficulties. Volunteer board members are already heavily taxed with their night-time responsibilities and day time jobs. They must press for simplicity but not sacrifice job effectiveness.

The process needs to be demonstrated more strongly to the boards, staff and public. Close attention to the progress or lack thereof is needed so that decisions and work will be diligently pursued.

Routine informal meetings of the school and town officials needs to be encouraged, to continue the building of mutual trust without which the program cannot succeed.

A professional planner is about to be appointed, to fill a major support role during the start-up phase.

Dog report

The Wilmington dog officer is presently holding the following dog. Dogs picked up in Wilmington are kept at the Central Animal Hospital in Stoneham.

Male shepherd, black and tan, with choke collar, picked up Nov. 16 on Salem Street near Cunningham.

Dogs held for ten days are available for adoption. Due to limited budgets and space, it is difficult to keep dogs longer than the minimum ten days. Therefore adoptions are now more important than ever, to prevent dogs having to euthanized.

The animal control officer may be contacted by calling 658-7845. For dog complaints, contact the Wilmington Police Department on its business line, 658-5071.

Mayflower afloat

A replica of the Mayflower was finished just in time for Thanksgiving by Sheryl Mosca's kindergarten class at the Woburn Street School. The class also made their own Indian and Pilgrim costumes, with the help of teacher's aide Cynthia Jones. Jeanne White to wed Stephen Bailey

Mr. and Mrs. Warren W. Bailey of Frederick Drive, Wilmington have announced the engagement of their son, Stephen Edward Bailey to Ms. Jeanne Rutledge White of Towson, Md.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Towson State University. Her fiance is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts and the University of Baltimore Law School. He is presently an assistant states attorney for Baltimore County, Md.

A spring wedding is planned.

Notre Dame students hold SADD Awareness Week

Every 20 minutes, a person dies from an alcohol-related incident. Nightly news reports are filled with fatalities brought on by drunken drivers, and even though the number of reports seems to climb every evening, Academy of Notre Dame students say they are not giving up the hope that they can keep those fatalities down!

Last week, the NDA chapter of "Students Against Drunk Driving" sponsored "S.A.D.D. Awareness Week" to remind the student body that drinking and driving is a lethal combination. S.A.D.D. Awareness Week is held twice a year at the Academy - once in the late fall and again in the spring before the prom and graduation. S.A.D.D. students do so in hopes to increase their peers' realization of how severe the consequences of driving under the influence are.

This semester's program officially began with the raising of the S.A.D.D. flag, which bears the slogan, "Friends for Life." As students gathered outside, S.A.D.D. chapter co-president, Kathy Livingston of Lowell, reinforced the flag's message. "Awareness," she said, "is the key ingredient of S.A.D.D.'s success...this flag will serve as a visible symbol of our commitment to each other for life."

Other events sponsored during the week include a Black and Red Day (S.A.D.D.'s representative colors), where students paid a dollar to be out of uniform, a S.A.D.D. bake sale and S.A.D.D. sundaes, which were sold during lunch period on a specified day.

The funds raised will be used to purchase something for the school that will directly benefit the students. Moderator and teacher at the Academy, Kathy Sennot commented, "the money raised will be of service to the students, however what is much more important is to realize the tremendous support that the kids have shown to the S.A.D.D. philosophy" - and the commitment that they have shown to one another.

Thanksgiving Notebook by Rick Cooke

A nice change of pace

Tewksbury High School football coach Bob Aylward smiled and nodded slightly when he first heard that I was picking Wilmington to topple his Redmen this Thursday morning. His team has plenty of weapons he noted, but so does Wilmington and coach Ed Harrison.

He's got six or seven three year starters over there," said the TMHS coach. "They are a very tough team and have played their best games against some of the better competition. They played both Central Catholic and Chelmsford very tough."

But coach, doesn't your team have a distinct advantage when it comes down to team speed, especially in the offensive backfield ? You look back there and you see some nice numbers compiled by Tim Lightfoot (580 yards), Abe Mills (252) and Sean Conley (178). And let's not forget that Conley has caught 15 passes from sophomore quarterback Dana Boudreau (48 for 103, six touchdowns) good for 229 yards.

Don't forget that quick kid Sean Mackey either coach, he of the 31 catches for 402 yards. Lightfoot can even catch the ball out of the backfield, with 12 grabs good for 171 yards so far this season.

Those statistics are nice, and Tewksbury football has a fine future after losing all 11 defensive starters before this season while developing a sophomore quarterback at the same time. Once again the Redmen have overcome adversity to play tough against bigger and more talented teams.

But these Wildcats have the air of a team on a mission. They have told the MVC that "hey we may be a tiny school, but we can play with you guys." Aylward, as always, is wary of his old team. He knows what makes these Wilmington kids tick.

"That Tuxbury kid and Catanzano have had great years," says Aylward while starting to go right down the brief Wildcat roster. "Palmer, Hicks.....they've all played well."

But, what about the Wilmington quarterback coach ? Sure, he started last year, but he has spent most of this season at fullback. "Frank Cenca has a lot of experience," says Aylward, while dismissing the notion that his team has a big advantage behind the center. "And that Fleming kid is going to be a great back. Killilea is getting better every week. They have the potential to be a real force."

Aylward and Harrison coached with each other under former Wilmington mentor Fred Bellissimo, so often these teams appear to be gazing directly into a mirror. "They do a lot of different things," notes Aylward. "I've always said that Eddie does a great job. His assistants, Tom Woods and Russ Cabral (both of whom played under Aylward) have also done great jobs. Those guys are all good X's and O's guys-they are always prepared. I have nothing but the highest respect for those people."

My pick is based solely upon Wilmington's edge in experience. The seniors on this team must be tired of having their heads handed to them on Thanksgiving morning. "They are a lot more experienced than we are, " admits Aylward. "This is the biggest game they've played in the 1980's. It's a chance for them to have a great year."

But Aylward knows that 6-4 looks a lot better than 5-5. "The opportunity is there for us to have a great year considering we have this much inexperience. Our entire defensive team was brand new, and Boudreau couldn't even throw in our camp (preseason) because of a thumb problem. To overcome all of that and still have the season that we've had in this league....."

No need to go on coach. I know I'm supposed to bleed Redmen colors, and that almost 20 years ago I lived in Tewksbury, but I'm going with Wilmington this year. A nice change of pace for the guy who prints nothing but Tewksbury sports. I just figured the fans were fed up with 15 years of this biased approach.

So, here goes coach. Wilmington 14 Tewksbury 13. An entertaining and competitive contest for those fans who take time out from Turkey Day socializing to watch the game....

PLUMBING
The plumbing is one of your home's more mysterious systems. Most of the pipes are hidden in the wall, and when you have a problem, you'll probably have to call in a plumber. Because plumbers charge hefty rates, prospective buyers are frequently frightened away by evidence of leaky pipes, ceiling stains below shower pans, or antiquated bathroom fixtures.
If you're planning to sell, it's a good idea to make sure your plumbing problems are solved before you place your home on the market. After the plumber finishes his work, you should take care of any cosmetic damage that leaks may have caused.
Are plumbing repairs cost-effective? Most sales agreements contain clauses calling for all systems, including plumbing, to be in working order. If you have a problem, you'll probably have to repair it before settlement in any case. Doing it ahead of time eliminates plumbing as an issue in the property's sale. Having your plumbing in top condition will also make your home seem well cared for, and this makes it more attractive to potential buyers.
If there's a move in your future, the real estate experts at Kelley & Kompany are ready to serve you. Call us at 658-4171 or drop by our office at 20 Middlesex Avenue in Wilmington.*

Ski fitness program

SportsAid, the Malden-based sports medicine center, is currently offering a comprehensive ski fitness program to prepare skiers for the upcoming season.

"Skibility" is being conducted at SportsAid's satellite facility, located at CMK Fitness Center, 300 Wildwood St., Woburn.

It includes an initial fitness evaluation, individualized six week fitness program and follow-up re-evaluation visit.

According to Sharon Lamb, SportsAid's assistant manager, now is the time to begin preparing for the ski season.

"Our goal is to help skiers, from beginners to experts, obtain a level of fitness that will enable them to enjoy skiing and reduce the risk of injury."

The program's initial evaluation includes testing of strength, endurance, agility and body fat.

Based on the results of this evaluation, a six week program is developed to fit each individual's personal fitness goals.

The program concludes with a follow up re-evaluation that is given to monitor the person's progress and adjust their fitness program if necessary.

Deer hunter's jargon defined!

by Bill Conlon

The ancient and honorable sport of the deer hunt is much trickier than you might think. There is much more to it than just strolling into the woods and blasting anything with antlers. Hunters have their very own language, but to those who don't hunt, the jargon of deerslayers can be mysterious.

So herewith is presented a glossary of deer-hunting terminology. Use it well and wisely.

Deer -- singular and plural. One deer or a herd of deer. Never deers, unless comparing the mule, sitka, whitetail and blacktail in a sentence.

Buck -- a boy deer. Bucks can be told at a glance from girl deer, since only the boys have antlers and the girls don't.

Doe (say "dough") -- a girl deer. No antlers, smaller than a buck, and prone to walk in front of bucks, like a minesweeper. Can be annoying.

Antlers -- like horns, but made of a modified form of hair. (Oh yes!) Note that antlers are temporary, as they grow every summer, and fall off in winter. Antlers are used by a buck to intimidate other bucks into leaving his girlfriends alone. A set of antlers is also called a rack, as in the wall display that will later result.

Scrape -- a bare patch of ground underneath a hanging branch, used by a buck to advertise to other bucks that they'd better stay away, and to inform the does that a male deer is nearby and ready for mating. Bucks clear off a two-foot patch of dirt, urinate on the scrape, then chew up the hanging branch to mark the spot as their very own. Good to find!

Rub -- a small tree with part of the bark gouged up (at about the height of a human's knee). Bucks will rub their antlers on the tree trunk, both to remove the soft membrane (or "velvet") which forms as the antlers grow, and also to warn other bucks that somebody nearby is ready for combat. Also nice to find!

Trail -- a clear path through the trees, made and used by deer. There are usually no branches left to snap along the path, so deer are then able to move silently. Hunters take note.

Droppings -- deer dung. Shaped like tiny eggs, a deep brown color. The size of the droppings is a fair indication of the size of the deer that left them. Droppings of one-inch in size mean a monster of a deer.

Battle circle -- a rare spot where two bucks have fought, to see which one earns mating rights to any does in the area. Look for a six-foot area of torn-up ground, often with bits of hair. A wonderful thing to find!

Antlerless deer permit -- or a "doe permit." A certificate from the state which allows a hunter to take a deer without antlers (a doe, but may be an antlerless young buck). Every other deer hunter in the camp will be looking for a doe to fill your tag, which is both illegal and a pain in the rump. Tell them to shove off.

Bed -- a flattened patch of leaves or grass, often near the top of a ridge or hill, where a deer slept recently. It is virtually impossible to nail a sleeping deer. Forget it.

Points -- The number of tips on the antlers. A 12-point buck is more deer than a spike or fork horn but weight is also used to judge the size of a deer. A 300-pound 12-pointer is more deer than a 90-pound fork or spike horn. Just ask any doe.

Weigh station -- official place where harvested deer are weighed and checked by a state biologist; also a spot where hunters gather to see the only deer they've seen all week.

Cover scent -- any of a number of horrible smelling substances used to cover up horrible human smells. Fox urine and skunk musk are very popular, at least until you walk into camp still wearing your scent pad. The smell is bad enough to knock a buzzard off a meat wagon. Whew!

Doe scent -- urine taken from a doe in estrus (in heat), which is put on the ground to attract a buck with romance on his mind. Putting such a scent on your immediate person may draw the buck's attention directly to you, which can make it impossible for you to take aim without warning him. Put it somewhere else. Nobody knows how the urine is collected.

Buck scent -- musk taken from glands on a buck's hind legs, used to enrage another buck into thinking that somebody is trying to put the moves on his doe. Again, don't put buck scent near yourself. An angry buck will charge in, looking for any movement at all, which may put you in an uncomfortable bind.

Rattling -- a real or fake set of antlers, slammed and rattled together to sound like two bucks fighting over a hot doe. Again, any buck that comes to investigate will be looking for movement. Don't show him any.

Grunt call -- an artificial device used to imitate the limited "voice" of a deer. Bucks may grunt as a threat warning to another buck, and again you don't want him looking directly at you. So think of something.

Blaze orange -- a bright shade of florescent orange which is visible in low light. Required by law in most states, and required by logic everywhere else. The wearing of blaze orange clothes has significantly cut down on hunter fatalities in every state that requires it. Wear lots of it.

Tracks -- the physical traces left by a deer that isn't here right now. Once used by wise hunters to follow prey, but now used by hunters as an excuse for becoming lost.

Field dressing -- the initial act of turning a dead deer into venison for the table. Involves a knife and a terrible mess. A knowledge of high school biology may be helpful.

Stand -- a place to sit. (How odd.) Put the stand where the deer walk.

Camp -- a temporary domicile for hunters during deer season. Hunters awaken before sunup, hunt 'til dark, then play poker, swear, spit, drink, smoke, scratch their private parts, make sexist comments about nearly everthing, and just generally have a great time until the next morning, when they will wake up and do it all over again.

Boone & Crockett -- a club that records big deer, measuring antlers through an abstract system of points and deductions. (Don't ask me!) The Boone & Crockett Club lists deer taken with guns, while archers list their records with Pope & Young.

Flag -- the snow-white underside of a deer's tail, displayed when the deer is frightened, and usually seen only on a deer heading away at warp factor eight. The origin of the name whitetail deer. A "flag" means it's too late to shoot, but some idiots will still try. Don't EVER wear anything white during deer season. God help you if some fool sees your white T-shirt.

Jumped -- (verb) scared away a deer that was hidden nearby.

Well, that's most of it. There are a heap of other phrases and words in the jargon of deer hunting, but these should get you started.

So, now you'll know that a hunter who claims to have jumped a 14- point buck that was bedded near a scrape, but he only saw the flag, may be onto a big deer if he wasn't lying. Find out where he hunts, then get to that spot early the next morning.

--- Tackle Box ---

Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club is looking for candidates for the 1990 Sportsman of the Year award. Must be a club member, naturally, and the additional qualifications include long service to the organization, conservation activity and efforts to preserve the sport. Submit names to the board of directors in December, but nominations will be discussed by the board behind closed doors.

Bow season for deer will end this Saturday in Massachusetts and it just looks like my first archery season is an utter bomb. I haven't seen a deer in the woods yet this season, which keeps me in tune with my last two deer seasons. Sigh!

Oh well, at least the ice will be forming up soon, for ice fishing.

Some of our seniors will not be as fortunate. They will be eating along with family a long way away or passed away. A nice way to make Thanksgiving Day meaningful is to check your neighborhood to see if there is an elderly person in this situation. If you find one, ask them to join your family at dinner.

If they are not able to join you, you can make a visit and take with you a dinner. I can assure you your enjoyment of Thanksgiving will be complete. Thanksgiving dinners will be served at some of the churches on Thursday by the women's clubs. If you would rather eat with others in the same situation as yourself, call the United Methodist Church . They served a dinner last year.

Fuel assistance

I will be making out fuel assistance up to Friday, Nov. 24. If you have not applied by then you will have to wait until I return from vacation. Now that the cold weather is upon us we have to be aware of hypothermia. What is hypothermia? It is when our body temperature drops below 95 degrees. At that time immediate treatment is necessary to provent a serious risk to your health or death. The elderly are most vulnerable to hypothermia we can be unaware that our body temperature is dropping. Keep your house warm do not turn your thermostat down.

Dress warm when you go out doors, wear a hat, keep your feet and hands warm. It is difficult to distinguish hypothermia from a stroke. A person becomes confused, forgetful, drowsy, speech becomes difficult, breathing slow, unusual irritability, stiff muscles and shivring. During the winter try to maintain good nutrition.

Center open Friday

The center will be open Friday, Nov. 24, but lunches will not be served and bingo has been cancelled Any senior who wishes a meal for that day should order an extra one during the week.

Nutrition programs beset by many pressures

Nutrition programs for the elderly across the state are being affected by the counter pressures of increasing elderly populations, increasing costs of food and delivery, and shrinking government support, according to a survey of the 27 member agencies of the Mass. Association of Elderly Nutrition Programs (MAENP). The statewide network of elderly nutrition programs provide daily hot noon meals for active, mobile seniors, and "meals on wheels" for more frail, homebound seniors. Cuts in state funding for services for the elderly have forced some programs to close meal sites and others to deny home delivered means to people in need. The survey revealed that across the state programs will serve approximately 93,000 fewer home delivered meals than expected this year, and 47,000 less congregate meals. At the same time, Massachusetts' elderly represent 18 percent of the population and, between 1980 and 1995, this group will have grown by eight percent, twice as fast as the overall state population.

TAKING CARE

It is estimated that nearly half of all people who reach age 65 will require at least some nursing home care. This is a sobering reality for those who must face up to meeting this considerable expense. Government insurance covers nursing home care only as a last resort, as defined by the exhaustion of family funds. Unfortunately, it is not uncommon for the family of a person in need of nursing home care to deplete all its savings in their effort to look after a loved one. In response to this problem, the insurance industry is offering private long-term care insurance. Those families with aging family members might be advised to look into it.

Age may not necessarily be the determining factor as to when one ages.This is a process that effects people at different points in their lives. The need for long term care becomes evident when loved ones need more and more assistance with the routine activities of daily living. Persons suffering from strokes or heart attacks may find themselves also unable to properly care for themselves. Long term health care may be just what you are seeking. Look to SPINELLI INSURANCE AGENCY, INC. at 90 Woburn St., Wilmington for your complete insurance protection. Office hours are from Mon.-Fri. 9-5. We wish you all a Happy Thanksgiving holiday.

Hint: Take inflated costs in the decades ahead into account when buying private long-term care insurance.

Wildcats ready to cap super season

by Rick Cooke
Sports Editor

The last Wilmington High School victory over Tewksbury in the annual Thanksgiving morning tussle between the two teams came in 1984 when the Wildcats nipped the Redmen, 9-7.

After four consecutive Turkey Day defeats, including a 27-0 thrashing a year ago, coach Ed Harrison's Wildcats are primed for what Tewksbury coach Bob Aylward calls "Wilmington's biggest game of the 1980's."

A Wildcat win Thursday morning would indeed be the culmination of a super season after a bunch of dreary campaigns in recent WHS football history.

The Wildcats are coming off solid victories over Lowell (15-13) and Billerica (7-0) and gave MVC top guns Central Catholic and Chelmsford real battles before finally going down to defeat.

Wilmington suits up 23 players, but with seven three-year starters and several players who ignore nagging injuries in weekly gut-checks, these Wildcats are a tough bunch capable of defeating the Redmen at Doucette Field Thursday morning.

Wilmington's seniors include quarterback Frank Cenca, running backs Steve Killilea and Mike O'Brien, receiver Greg Catanzano, tackle Gregg Smith, and a group of aggressive players that include Dick Hersom, Brett Hicks, Chris D'Amelio, Scott Tuxbury and Eric Palmer.

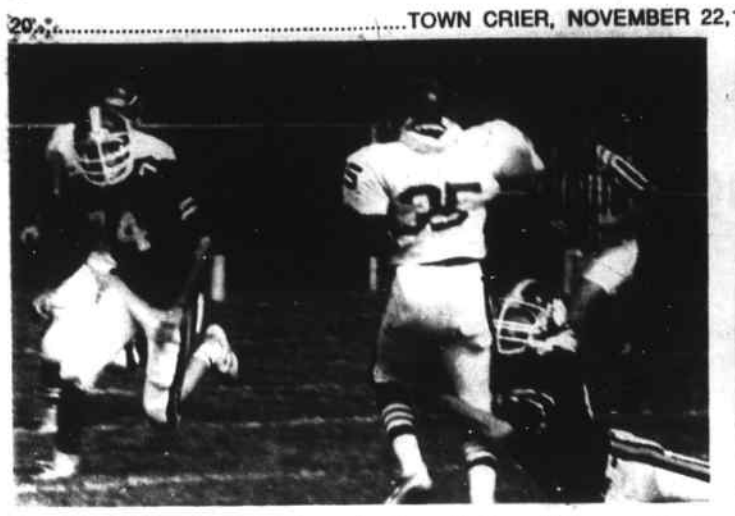
Buzzing around all of this activity is mighty-mite sophomore halfback Bob Fleming, who has hung tough in the face of a nagging arm injury. Dennis Walsh, the starter at quarterback for most of the season, has moved to wide receiver with interesting results, and he teams with Catanzano and junior Bob Voner to form a solid group of receivers for Wilmington.

If the Redmen have an advantage it is speed in the offensive backfield. Juniors Tim Lightfoot and Sean Conley are capable of breaking the big play at anytime, and senior Abe Mills has come on strong this season to be a threat out of the backfield and on kick returns. Junior receiver Sean Mackey has also bounced back from injury and is another breakaway threat for Tewksbury.

The offense all revolves around the play of sophomore quarterback Dana Boudreau, who has come back from a summer camp thumb problem to give the fans a taste of his great potential.

Defensively, Tewksbury is led by senior linebacker Bob Marshall who has had an all-conference season. The gang-tackling defense also is sparked by the play of Chris Dick, Jon Harvey, Dave Babine, Marc Whynot, Andy DeFelice, Brian Brooks, Sean Wilson and Steve Lavalle. Mills has also be a super performer in the defensive backfield for Tewksbury.

It is just about a certainty that this will be the best Wilmington-Tewksbury game since 1985 when the Redmen escaped with a 7-6 victory. This Wilmington team is not prone to being blow away, and the hunch here is that the Wildcats will pull a minor upset and defeat the Redmen to complete what has been a dream season for a team that just a year ago was being told that they didn't have enough players to compete in the Merrimack Valley Conference.



Helping hand

Wilmington's Scott Tuxbury (74) moves in to help out on this tackle against Lawrence.

Ready for battle

Clockwise: TMHS defensive back Steve Lavalle (21) returns this interception vs. Billerica as Abe Mills (22) throws a block; WHS receiver Greg Catanzano (85) snares this pass against Lawrence; quarterback Dennis Walsh talks strategy with coaches Ed Harrison and Russ Cabral; Tim Lightfoot (33) runs behind a block from Mike Craven (66); Walsh fires a pass behind the blocking of Scott Tuxbury (74); Dana Boudreau drops back to pass vs. Dracut; Sean Mackey breaks free for a good gain against the Middies.

Pies are her specialty

DIANE FOY OF WILMINGTON, piemaker extraordinaire, sports a smile next to her second-place winner's ribbon from the statewide pumpkin pie contest at this year's Topsfield Fair. Foy, who says she has been "making pies forever," has a wide following of pie addicts, locally and across the country, who know her work well.

(Jim Rouillard photo)

By JIM ROUILLARD

She came within a pumpkin skin of victory - and snatched success from a sea of mud.

Diane Foy and her family like to dissect pies.

That may be because they live in the kitchen.

Foy, a Wilmington resident who says she has been "making pies forever," was faced this fall with a quandary.

A woman who pays little attention to recipes, she had to provide one for her pumpkin pie contest entry at this year's Topsfield Fair. But to come up with a recipe, she said, you have to have one.

"I just make the pie," she smiled, "I don't have it written out."

But Foy said she entered the contest anyway, largely on a whim and a prayer. She wrote up and submitted process and ingredients from a recipe she had created some years before.

By the morning of the contest, however, she said she was pretty much ready to chuck the whole business.

"I make pies all the time and never have trouble with the crust," she explained. "But that day, if my husband had asked how I was doing I was ready to say: 'It's hanging from the ceiling.'"

Foy figures she must have omitted some ingredient because she rolled out eight crusts, none of which would stick together.

But the ninth crust worked.

Despite having a vast train of friends and acquaintances who clamor for her work and carry it all over the country, Diane Foy seems to be a woman of fairly substantial modesty. She said in fact that her family tried to bolster her sagging confidence on the day of the judging:

"What can they do to a pumpkin pie? her mother asked. "It's round. It's orange. It has a crust."

But when she brought the pie to the fairgrounds, the Wilmington piemaker knew she was sunk:

Prize Winning Recipe

Diane Foy's Prize-Winning Pumpkin Pie

Ingredients:

Crust:
- 2 cups flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 3/4 cup shortening
- 1/3 cup cold water

Filling:
- 1/8 tsp. salt
- 2.3 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup light brown sugar
- 1 tsp. cinnamon
- 1/2 tsp. nutmeg
- 1/2 tsp. ginger
- 2 eggs.
- 1 can evaporated milk
- 1 1/2 cup cooked pumpkin

Crust:

Mix flour and salt together and cut in shortening until mixture resembles pea size. Add water and toss lightly until mixture sticks together. Divide in half and roll out one half for bottom crust. Place in pan and flute edge.

Filling:

Mix dry ingredients together and stir into beaten eggs. Add milk and pumpkin. Stir. Pour filing into unbaked pie shell. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes, then 325 degrees for 35 minutes or until a knife comes out clean.

"Mine was just plain and simple, kind of the way I view myself, without any frills - and here were all these wonderful-looking pies."

There were pies with elaborate crusts - with pecans on top of the filling arranged in pumpkin design - and pies topped with crust in ingenious shapes. There were pies with fancy whipped cream topping and pecans mixed into the filling.

There was even one with cranberries and Kellogg's Sugar Frosted Flakes sprinkled on top.

So much for the plain and simple, Foy decided, plunking down her round, orange, crusted creation.

It was pouring rain in Topsfield on the day of the judging, she added, and the fairgrounds were a sea of mud. So she almost didn't go back to see how her pie fared.

But she was persuaded.

Well, she won of course, not first prize - yet - but second.

As the judges' results were announced, in reverse order of excellence, she said she felt convinced she had no chance when one of the fancy pies came in third.

The her knees actually gave out, but her husband held her up when second prize was announced.

PART THREE

With pensive curiosity, Roger eyeballed the eerie-looking house. "You're right," he said, and then he said, "I hope no more neighborhood kids decided to move in while we were out to dinner." The corners of his mouth curled. "I never thought to put a light on."

He parked the van in the driveway, and we went into the house. I wondered what we would do if indeed some whacky local kids

About the towns

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

STONEHAM - Did you catch his latest act on World Monitor TV or Channel 2? In the Globe or this very supplement?

Did you catch his latest book at the Stoneham library, Museum of Science or Boston Children's Museum?

"Building a Jawbone Kayak" by Stoneham's own Zu Freeman is in print and in the media. "The inexpensive materials and techniques used to build a kayak were originally developed in the '30's during the Depression," says Freeman. "The materials are still available and just as effective today. You can still build a kayak for less than $20 in less than 20 hours.

"And building it is as much fun as launching it - it's a great family project."

The book is also available at Salem's Peabody Museum and Woodcraft Supply in Woburn. Through the Boy Scout Minuteman and Lone Tree Councils, and the Girl Scout Council's Country Store.

And from Freeman.

WILMINGTON - Thanks to a grant from the Mass. Board of Library Commissioners, the Wilmington Memorial Library now boasts two Apple II GS computers, one in the children's room and one for adults.

The grant also provided for a "well rounded" collection of software which continues to grow, along with an impressive number of hours logged by card-carrying community members. Several successful computer orientation sessions have already been conducted by reference librarian Chris Dehoff and volunteers Sandra Curtin, Kathleen Huntley and Jan Williams.

READING - Reading Federal Emergency Management Agency reservist Joyce P. Ralph traveled to San Francisco recently to help earthquake victims. Having had extensive training in disaster assistance, she worked seven days a week processing claims for federal grants and loans.

WINCHESTER - Winchester's recently re-assembled Fair Housing Board is mandated to update a fair housing plan created five years ago and recommend a housing document or set of guidelines to the Board of Selectmen, who will pass it on for state approval.

Who ya gonna call if you suspect or experience a housing problem? Selectman Judie Muggia, Realtor Helen Poftak, Housing Authority member R. Bradford Bailey, residents Sally Kincaid and Skip DiNatale, banker Edward Goodwin, tenant Vincent Moxley, and Planning Board member Maryann McCall-Tavlor.

SENIOR CENTER - A co-ed 45-minute exercise-to-music class will begin at Reading's Senior Center next week under the direction of "retired" physical therapist Patty Mack Hewitt.

Classes will meet on Mondays and Wednesdays at 10 a.m. and are modeled after similar successful Winchester program - participants must bring a doctor's note okaying the stretching and walking, at $1.25 per shot.

Given the time of year, we wonder if Hewitt will start off with a turkey trot

ROVING

From S-1

I felt like a fool; hearing those strange sounds and seeing what I thought was a small fire burning in the back yard made me wonder if I was suffering from some form of auditory and visual hallucination. Surely Roger would think I was being overly imaginative. He'd probably attribute the hallu- had broken into the house while we were gone.

Roger flicked on the small chandelier lights that hung from the ceiling in the center of the foyer. No one came charging at us, no glimmering knife blades came crashing down on us, so I figured we were safe. Roger proceeded into the living room, where he turned on a couple of more lights. He asked me if I wanted to watch television. It sounded like a good idea.

"I think there are still a few beers in the frig from the last time I was here," he said. "I'll check while you fiddle with the dial."

I located something that seemed reasonably attention-grabbing. Roger returned with two cans of beer. We half-watched the tube, half-conversed for the next couple of hours. Finally, we both admitted we were tired, and we decided to retire for the night. I followed Roger upstairs, and he showed me to the spare bedroom in which I was going to spend the night. He told me that he was going to sleep in the other spare bedroom. It crossed my mind that he didn't say his grandparents' former bedroom.

"See you in the morning, Rog," I said, and I closed the bedroom door. I had turned on a small bureau lamp first, and decided to keep it on for the night. I didn't like admitting it, but I didn't feel comfortable sleeping in that bedroom in total darkness.

The room was sparsely furnished: the bed, a bureau and lamp, a small wooden chair and a reading table. The latter stood directly next to the bed, and on it rested several magazines. I sat on the edge of the bed and leafed through all of them, a copy of an old Look magazine which featured a cover story on the beefing up of America's presence in Southeast Asia. A battle-weary GI's face filled the entire cover, with the letters L-O-O-K obscuring most of his helmet. At the bottom of the cover was a message about a photo-journalist's three-month trek along the MDZ with a division of U.S. soldiers.

My eyes quickly became strained in the low-watt light. I set the magazine down and sprawled out to sleep. I wasn't sure if I'd sleep well that night, but I was going to give it the old college try. Within minutes, I slipped into a light sleep.

A strange sound awoke me from the light sleep. My brain oriented itself almost instantly. I listened intently for the sound to happen again. It did, finally. I wasn't sure of what the sound was, or where it came from. It resembled the sound of slippers scrapping across a hardwood floor. Slowly, gently. Perhaps it was Roger, awakening and deciding to slip downstairs for a snack or a drink. Sure, I thought, he doesn't want to disturb my sleep.

I got out of bed and quietly opened the door to peek into the hallway. No lights and no Roger schlepping about in the middle of the night. I closed the door and returned to bed. Again I listened for the sound. It returned. I was sure this time that it came from above me. The attic? There's no one in the attic, I reminded myself. It had to be my imagination. Or a friendly house mouse, scurrying about and playing in the domain which he probably claimed a long, long time ago. If it was a friendly house mouse, he was entertaining himself at the expense of my sleep. But who was I to interrupt this long term border? I attempted to go back to sleep, in spite of the noise.

Sleep did not come easily. It was broken a second time by another sound.This time it resembled, of all things, the gentle cry of a baby. A baby! I thought, as my line of vision darted in the direction of the window. I was certain that this noise came from the back yard. I climbed out of bed, went to the window and pulled back the flimsy curtain that hung loosely in front of it. I couldn't see a thing. With the light on behind me, everything outside the window was pitch-black.

I unlocked the window, opened it without much effort. I poked my head out, any traces of sleepiness being washed away by the nip in the cool fall air. Suddenly I heard that sound again, the sound that resembled a baby's soft cry. Then it struck me: it wasn't a baby at all, but a cat! There was a cat somewhere outside, and it was meowing.

The meowing became steadier. It was coming from somewhere in the back yard. My eyes searched,

Pie contest winner

from S-1

"I'm afraid I didn't have much to say," she related, "When they asked me to talk about my pie." The judges offered some feedback, though, praising the crust, which they said was really good, and the texture of the filling. Diane explained that might be one of her secrets: she cooks the pumpkin but doesn't mash it, so there are bits of the flesh in the filling.

The Lynn native, who has lived in Wilmington for 22 years, said she and her family, including four cats and three sons, really live in the kitchen, where they like to sit and dissect the quality of pies, usually hers.

"During holidays it's crazy around here," she laughed, commenting on the home-made pie business which she runs from the house. "It's pieville."

Foy and her husband Jim own orchards and farmland in Haverhill where they grow their own fruits and vegetables for Diane's pies.

Self-described as a "purist on taste and texture," she said she makes her own mock mincemeat ("What else can you do with all those green tomatoes?"), grows her own pumpkins and golden delicious squash for HER favorite pie. As for her apple pie, which this writer was lucky enough to sample, she said the filling depends on what's available in her orchard, but may include Macs, Northern Spies, Red and Golden Delicious, Yellow Transparents, or Cortlands.

She said that the winner at this year's Topsfield Fair - a woman from Saugus - will compete with piemakers from across the country in Georgia next spring. She added that the sponsors of the nationwide contest designate the type of pie for each state competition. Nevada's, for example, was a cherry pie - apparently in honor of the cherries which appear on the Las Vegas slot machines.

As for Foy's other pies, they are often seen travelling, she added. Friends and customers who are addicted to them will often order up several every time they take a trip: to Kansas, Florida, Ohio, Maine.

Her specialty, by the way, is chocolate cream pie.

What's it like?

Well, it's round, it's dark, it has a crust - and it's made by Diane Foy.

That's really all you need to know.

CHRISTMAS CARDS HELP THE HOMELESS

Do you ever wish you could recapture the true spirit of the Holidays - of loving, of caring, and of giving the meaning. This year you can be sending specially designed Christmas Cards purchased from St. Francis House, the largest day shelter for the homeless in Boston. All monies go to help those in desperate need this year.

These cards which can be purchased for $5 each will tell your friends that "a gift has been given in your honor to St. Francis House Day Shelter for the Homeless and Poor in Boston. This gift will allow St. Francis House to provide warmth, food and comfort to a child of God who is truly needy this Holiday Season." The inside of the card carries the greeting, "The Peace of God be with you this Holiday Season," and has a picture of a painting by George Bard, Jr., who was inspired by a homeless man sleeping on a bench.

"Your Christmas card will have mattered in the true spirit of loving and of caring," says Brother David Schlatter, OFM of St. Francis House. "And you will know that there are homeless people whom you have helped and who are very grateful for your gift."

To order these Holiday cards send a check for the number of cards desired made payable to St. Francis House/Holiday Card and send that to P.O. Box 499, Essex Station, Boston, 02112 and enclose your complete mailing address.

The St. Francis House staff serves hot, nutritious meals to approximately 400 people every day of the year and offers counseling, job/housing assistance, clothing, medical and support services. The hope of the staff and volunteers is to restore dignity and independence to all whom they serve.

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

The Little Mermaid

ORLANDO, FLORIDA - It's the first fairy tale to spew out of the Disney workshops in 30 years. The story is nothing new - a mermaid who falls in love with a human. A theme the same company used a few years back with "Splash." But if the plot to "The Little Mermaid" sounds tired, the very sight of the movie will rejuvenate you. This loose adaptation of the Hans Christian Andersen tale is a bubbly, lilting, toe-tapping, family-oriented delight. The kind of movie to sigh over.

While the plot is not all that far removed from your basic Cinderella fantasy, the depth of the visuals, the vocals, the New York stage sound of the songs and score are combined into a rich cinematic experience. And though Disney animated films have always pounded home those old-fashioned role models, leaving us to believe all girls/women are waiting for their prince, at least the fin-flipping Ariel is less of a bippity, boppity dope than her past counterparts.

Walt Disney Pictures reached back into the past not only for a story, but for inspiration, as this flick represents 82 glorious minutes of animation the likes of which we haven't seen in 30, maybe 40 years. Under the auspices of Jeffrey Katzenberg, chairman of Walt Disney Studios, the company has combined the best of past technique and modern methods to put the animation division back on track. The stubborn mermaid Ariel, her bullish father King Triton, Pat Carroll as a fierce sea-witch, a spirited Jamaican crab and a handsome prince verily soaring to life in a way last year's cast of "Oliver and Company" didn't.

Katzenberg says the undisclosed budget was about the same for both films. Many of the same animators worked on both projects. Composers Howard Ashman and Alan Menken ("Little Shop of Horrors") contributed to last year's "Oliver" and provided all of the music for "Mermaid." But the feel here is different. "Oliver" was cute. "Mermaid" is something you won't want to miss in re-release seven years from now.

Glen Keane, co-animator of Ariel, helped to explain. "This film was very different from any other, because it was scripted right from the start. Usually, you can't do that with a film, because nobody thinks like an animator does. The guys who wrote the film were animators (Ron Clements and John Musker). They included things in the story that lent themselves to drawings and visuals. On past films, you'd work on a story in a very rough way and then as you got the actors and animators in there, the story would change and you'd just sort of mold it along. It would take a four-year process." The animation for "Mermaid" took only 15 months. This, of course, does not include the time needed for writing, recording, storyboarding and post-production.

Keane also said that live action reference was used for the first time since "Snow White." Photostats of a swimming actress with the same proportions as Ariel were pinned up over the animators' work areas. Keane explained that looking at the photos helped give him more of a range, more ways to, say, draw a hand than he had imagined.

It wasn't a process needed in "Oliver and Company," as that story was populated with dogs, not humans. Also, animator David Stephan explained that with Bette Midler's character of Georgette, the artist could characterize her movements or just use her as a reference, as he did with goofy snapshots of Buddy Hacket, who provided the voice of the sea gull, Scuttle. Keane added that a choreographer came in for "Mermaid" and danced for the animators, who could then follow specific movements for the many musical numbers.

For this film, specific animators were cast to characters, whereas in the past they were attached to sequences. The animators had the chance to explore their characters and the freedom to add detail. Little computer-generated animation was used, as the studio employs it only for non-animate objects, of which there were few.

Forty artists worked on "Mermaid," following weekly guidelines, as opposed to the old, old days, when deadlines were rather lax. Musker, who directed as well as co-wrote and co-produced the film, said to alleviate some of the pressure from the animators, two separate units will be producing films in the future.

The animators have all been assigned new projects and the studio has asked Ashman and Menken to stick around. They are currently working on the next fairy tale, "Beauty and the Beast." Ashman said he is even thinking of recording not just the songs, but the orchestrated music first, "which is even more of a throwback to the old days. The Silly Symphonies were done to classical music pieces. There is probably a reason it all evolved that way. There is something very comfortable about animating to music," he said.

There is also something very comforting about the knowledge that the company did what it promised. A year ago, Katzenberg stated the studio would try to produce a new animated film a year, roughly alternating contemporary stories with fairy tales or folk lore.

The plan seems to be working. "Rescuers Down Under" and a Mickey Mouse version of "The Prince and the Pauper" will be going out as a double bill next year. He said "Rescuers" will probably be under 70 minutes long, and "The Prince and the Pauper" will be no longer than 30 minutes. It will be followed by "Beauty and the Beast." A Baby Herman short, "Roller Coaster Rabbit" will be seen with the live action film "Dick Tracy" next summer. Roy Disney, Walt's look-alike nephew and vice chairman of the company, said that "Fantasia" will be re-released next year for the film's 50th anniversary. The studio is going back to the original music tracks and will try to bring the quality up to the level of modern recordings.

Katzenberg said about 35 ideas are now circulating for future projects. A few that have jelled include "An Arabian Night," the story of Aladdin, "Swan Lake," a musical fairy tale and "King of the Jungle," about a young lion who has to assume the position of king. The wirey chairman added he hopes the latter "will be our 'Bambi.' "

A hefty load, this. When Katzenberg came to the company from Paramount in 1984, there were only 175 people in the animation department. "Today," he said, "there are over 600 employees in the television animation company, we've opened a studio in Paris with 150 employees. We've just opened one in London that's got a nearly hundred. We've got a studio in Hong Kong, Taiwan, South Korea, Japan and Sydney, Australia."

The man wasn't joking when he stated that "animation is the foundation on which this whole company is built. It is our soul." A bit lofty, perhaps, but with "The Little Mermaid," the sincerity is on the screen, even as coins jangle into the till.

School notes

by phyllis nissen

---Sunday driver: The Reading High Marching Band and Band Parents Organization would like to publically thank Al Cincotta of Reading Moving and Storage for his heavy-duty and moving support this fall.

Cincotta donated a moving van and driver to transport the band to enough NESBA Sunday afternoon competitions to make band members eligible for the November finals - which saw them take a second place silver in Boston University's Nickerson Field state competition.

---A rousing cheer goes to Wilmington Director of Performing and Fine Arts Lorraine Kalil for her recent performance at Wilmington High's first football game of the season: She immediately donated her winnings of $62.50 from a Booster Club drawing to the Wilmington High cheerleaders for supplies.

Booster chances sell for one dollar apiece with half the money raised going to one winner, the other half toward athletic scholarships. Last year, according to the Wilmington Town Crier, the Boosters awarded $500 scholarships to 17 seniors.

---Representative Augusto Grace recently honored Jaclyn Jordan and Danielle Dunn, two members of Burlington's Spirit Soccer Team which represented Massachusetts in the Eastern Regional Championship in Niagara Falls.

---North Reading's "Academic Support Group" was formed four years ago in an effort to improve communications on academic issues between the school and parent communities.

---"Crackerbarrel" meetings are held in various Winchester homes as part of an ongoing, informal effort to introduce Superintendent Dr. Charles Mitsakos to parents and other community members. The meetings begin at 7:30 p.m. and offer pleasant opportunities for the sharing of questions and concerns about education.

---Stoneham High teachers Lydia Breen and Howard Dimmick have hit bottom - and have received nothing but waves of approval for doing so.

As part of a scientific survey - with 17 other teachers - of the site of a proposed sewer outfall to be used by the new secondary sewage treatment plant to be built at the entrance to Boston Harbor on Deer Island, they dove in a deep diving Delta Submersible from the support ship R-V Powell.

Project Oceanology of Groton, Connecticut and the National Science Foundation are conducting this two-year Undersea Research Program for secondary school teachers.

Breen and Dimmick will complete the first phase of the program by analyzing the data collected and designing a student research program around it.

So much for this week's deep subject.

Christmas tree line

The Massachusetts Christmas Tree Association is again providing a toll free telephone number (1-800-521-3550), dubbed the "Tree Line," to put you in touch with your local grower of real Christmas trees. From November 15 to December 20, you can call during the hours of 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. for the names and locations of farms or sales lots offering Massachusetts grown real trees and other products.

The toll free number was a tremendous success last year and both the consumer and grower were well pleased with the service designed to make finding a tree easier. Lists of farms, once in circulation, tend to be reprinted year after year without benefit of update and can lead tree buyers on long, fruitless searches for farms no longer in business or sold out for the season. Helping consumers find a Massachusetts grown real Christmas tree with a minimum of trouble is the goal of the "Tree Line."

The "Tree Line" project is designed and sponsored by the Massachusetts Christmas Tree Association and is assisted by support from the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture.

Londonderry Faire at Norteast Trade Center

Thanksgiving weekend is the traditional time of year for the Christmas season to begin. This year is no exception as one of the traditional events of the season continues in the Greater Boston area, the 15th Annual Londonderry Faire. Londonderry Faire is one of Eastern Massachusetts most spectacular Christmas art and craft shows featuring 300 professional artists and craftsmen from all over the United States.

The show opens at the Northeast Trade Center on Friday, November 24 from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, November 25, the hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Jinx Harris, the organizer for the show, says, "the public will find all types of original handcrafted gifts made by American artists and craftsmen." Mrs. Harris also stated "Londonderry Faire's success all these years can be attributed to bringing the highest quality show to the public and making the faire a family event. By having entertainment like clowns, Mr. Tallman and Santa Claus."

Featured out of state artists are Claus Andersen of Irving, Texas who will be showing his air brush outer space art forms and Chinese artist John Cheng from Hillsborough, New Jersey. Many local professional craftsmen will be at the Londonderry Faire such as glass engraver Craig Tyrie of Framingham; porcelain doll maker, Dorothy Kelley of Methuen and children doll lamps by Brenda Nadolski of Westford. Other crafts that will be on display are pottery, jewelry, stained glass, toys, photography, personalized gifts and much more.

The Londonderry Faire caters to those who shop for one of a kind gifts and for those who find it difficult to buy American handcrafted items. The location of the show is at the Northeast Trade Center in Woburn, exit 35 off Rte. 128. Children 12 and under are free with an adult.

"PETER PAN" FLIES INTO COLONIAL THEATRE

Peter Pan, the perennial boy who won't grow up, will be soaring into Boston when the ageless musical masterpiece begins a four week holiday engagement at Boston's Colonial Theatre December 15. Press opening for this family treat is scheduled for Tuesday, December 19, with the run continuing through Sunday, January 7.

This lavish new Peter Pan, based on Jerome Robbins' original Broadway concept, features Cathy Rigby in the title role, and an adaptation of Sir James M. Barrie's turn of the century story that closely follows the source material. The memorable score first heard in 1954, was composed by Moose Charlap, with lyrics by Carolyn Leigh, additional music by Jule Styne; additional lyrics by Betty Comden and Adolph Green. Among the show's many show-stopping songs are "I'm Flying", "Neverland," and "I Won't Grow Up."

Cathy Rigby, best known as the first American woman to win a medal in the World Gymnastics competition, is no stranger to the musical theatre, and the role of the eternally youthful Peter Pan. Ms. Rigby played the part in a Los Angeles revival that broke all box office records at the Long Beach Civic Light Opera in 1987. For information call 423-9366.

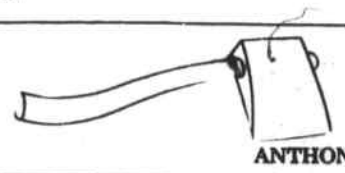
Woodchips



ANTHONY MANCONI

The manager of Village Carpet in Reading said to me, "Woodchips, I'd give you a job as a salesman but, although you are colorful and durable, you don't look rugged enough.

Employees of East Coast Oil Company are "tankful" people. Gym was my favorite sport in high school. There are two wonderful schools in the area, Reading Gymnastics Academy and Northeast Gymnastics Center in Wilmington. I remember when a Woburn locksmith's son and daughter excelled as "tumblers." Bob Giguere became a Parallel Bars champion. Mickey's on one side of the street and Reardon's on the other side. Bobby Burns was a great shot-putter. He could put a shot away before Stitch Etheridge, the bartender, could water it down.

A catchy tune years ago started with this line, "A kiss on the hand is so continental but diamonds are a girl's best friend." Well, if you are going to buy one for your sweetheart, Varti's Jewelers in Wakefield is a good place to go. Which reminds me, two weeks after my Aunt Nora from Wilmington became a widow, she went to a garden club meeting wearing a diamond almost the size of the Rock of Gibraltar. The ladies (green with envy) asked where in the world she got it. "When my husband, Angelo, died," she said, "he left $7,000 in cash with a note. It said that I was to spend $2,000 for a gravesite and $5,000 for a stone and this is it!"

I often wonder why some banks are called 5 Cents Savings Banks. The first one I remember as a kid was the Charlestown Five. Now they are almost everywhere including the Woburn Five Cent Savings Banks, where I have an account. I wonder if I went to the teller's window and planked down a nickel to be deposited if the teller would faint, or call the paddy wagon, or the man with the butterfly net for me? Kathy went to the Dress Barn in Stoneham and asked the manager, "Sir, may I try on the red dress in the window?" "By all means do," he replied. "I'm sure it will stir up a lot of interest!"

I bought Kathy a canary for her birthday. It wasn't much of a singer and besides that Kathy noticed that it hopped on one leg. "Why you idiot," she exclaimed. "They palmed off an injured bird on you. Go back and get your money then go to a first class pet shop. I did. I went to the Wilmington Pet Shop where I bought a beautiful canary. I brought it home and said to Kathy, "Here's your present dear. This canary is not only a beautiful singer but a wonderful dancer too!"

A beautiful day and a wonderful Woburn Lions Halloween Parade dedicated to Edmund Leonardis, a veteran member of the Lions Club. I was delighted to see many men, young and a little older, doff their hats as our flag, Old Glory, was going by. The Woburn High School Band, decked out in new uniforms, was superb as were the Boston College Band and the University of Mass. Marching Band. I recalled reading 'one of Mark Twain's sayings, "We can't all be heroes, some of us must stand on the curb and salute and applaud as they go marching by." Congratulations Lions Club, Mayor John Rabbitt and all who worked so hard to make this parade one of the greatest ever.

Woodchips Personality Winners: Amy Harootian, Tom Fuller, John Ahern and Aaron Bates, Jr., all from Reading; Diane Connolly, Laura Farrey and Andrea Shea, all from Woburn; Lisa Schertel and Diane Jackson from Burlington; Jim Ward, Scott Dinan and Donna Smalarz, all from Wakefield; Kevin Guarnotta of Winchester; Jason Rogers and Pat McCarthy both from Stoneham; Mayor John W. Rabbitt and his lovely wife, Lois, of Woburn; the beautiful Drum Major Christine Sampson, Kenneth Lucci and Jerry Marquis, all of North Reading; Robert and Genevieve Frongillo (congratulations on your 34th wedding anniversary), Michael and Elaine Buchanan of Tewksbury; Fr. Vincent Gianni of Lynnfield.

My cousin Tommy is married to Kate but is still in love with a former classmate named Edith. His wife found out and told Tom, in no uncertain terms that he couldn't have his Kate and Edith too! Folks, have you noticed the influx of animals that were hardly ever seen in the inner cities and towns? There are more squirrels in my back yard than ever. There is also a friendly raccoon, numerous skunks, woodchucks and even an opossum. Dennis Tully piped up and said that Joe Nugent of Wilmington told him that a man was killed by a weasel years ago. Vinny Harrington had to ask, "How did it happen, Dennis?" "Well," Joe said, "the poor guy was crossing the railroad tracks and got hit by the trains when he didn't hear the "weasel!"

Mark Twain said, "Anyone who likes his or her job doesn't have to work another day. Woodchips congratulates Raymond and Edith Wheaton who recently celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary. I am a firm believer in land conservation - especially wetlands. Therefore I take great pleasure in commending the work of the Reading Open Land Trust. Some of the members are Ben Nichols, James Boucher, Henry Fienemann, Theo Johnson, Bob Cummings, Bob Nordstrand, Nancy Anderson and Joseph Collnan.

A chiropractor told Bill McGarr "I think it's going to rain." "How do you know?" Bill asked. "I can feel it in your bones." A few readers have told me they enjoy trying to solve the riddles I have in this column. (My Aunt Nora said that I am the biggest riddle of all.) Well, anyway, here goes. - "Brothers and sisters I have none but that man is my father's son." The answer is after the next chip. A doctor taking a young intern on his hospital rounds said to him, "This young lad was born with one leg shorter than the other - he limps. Tell me, what would you do in his case?" The intern's instant answer was, "I guess I'd limp too, doctor." The answer to the riddle is the man reciting those words is looking into a mirror.

They sure are getting prettier and prettier - I mean some newly elected public officials (women of course). To wit, Catherine Shaughnessy, et al. Students from Wakefield High School who are rehearsing for their upcoming production of the well-known comedy, "The Man Who Came to Dinner", are Tucker Hurton, Nicole Lamy, Ken Orben, Elisa Doughty, Scott Rogers and other. The man who came to dinner didn't come to my house because he wouldn't have stayed over an hour. Kathy doesn't announce "Dinner is served" or "Dinner is ready." She usually says, "Dinner is burnt!" No one in the family wonders why the smoke alarm goes off anymore. My dog has eaten so much burnt meat that he isn't a Golden Retriever anymore - he looks more like a Black Labrador.

Woodchips wishes, Good Luck, Good Health and many years as pastor of St. Charles to Rev. Paul T. Walsh. Fr. John Crispo of St. Margaret's Church in Burlington always welcomes an "Irish Collection" - all green.

Star of the week is Nancy Murphy of Woburn.

OPERA COMPANY OPENING PERFORMANCE DEC. 8

The Merrimack Lyric Opera Company opens its fifth season with performances of Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" to be held at historic St. Anne's Church, Merrimack at Kirk Street, downtown Lowell on Friday, December 8 at 7 p.m. and Saturday, December 9 at 2 and 4 p.m.

Under Artistic Director John Douglas, the production features mezzo soprano Valerie Walters as Amahl's mother and Bill Dederer as Amahl. Walters, who is well known to Boston audiences for her performances in oratorios and concerts as well as opera productions, has won critical acclaim for her appearances in classical and contemporary roles on both European and American stages. Bill Dederer, a member of the Treble Chorus of New England, has most recently been heard with Boston Lyric Opera in Tosca. The supporting cast includes Fernando Mancillas, Robert Holden and Gregory Sheppard as the Three Kings. An impish page and a chorus of shepherds complete the colorful cast.

Premiered over national television in 1951, Amahl has become a Christmas tradition. It is an opera for children which recounts what happens to an unsuspecting 12-year-old crippled boy and his mother when three kings just happen to drop in. "Amahl and the Night Visitors" is filled with the drama and beauty of Christmas and has been delighting family audiences for three decades.

Tickets are $10 for adults, $8 for seniors and $5 for youths 17 and under. Discounts are available for groups of 10 or more. Ticket orders may be made by mail or phone, Visa and MasterCard accepted.

Call (508) 453-4560 for tickets or further information.

128 Auto in Wakefield re-opens its Volvo facility

WAKEFIELD - 128 Auto, which recently trimmed back its operation as a cost saving measure during the recent economic downturn, has re-opened its Volvo facility in Reading.

According to Vice President and General Manager James Evergates, "we always intended to re-open our facilities on the Reading side, it was just a question of time."

Evergates explained that 128 Auto "has always been a part of the Wakefield and Reading communities, and it always will be. We closed the Saab/Volvo and Ford showrooms because we wanted to insure that our operation would remain profitable."

Now, he said, "we are confident that we can operate as we did in the past and provide our valued customers with the type of service that they deserve. Luckily, our physical plant allows us the flexibility to make these changes when they become feasible."

It was earlier this year that 128 Auto consolidated all of its various dealerships on the Wakefield side, moving the Ford, Saab and Volvo sales and service divisions to the Oldsmobile, Mazda and Isuzu facilities.

Evergates noted that "during that period we were still able to maintain full sales and service operations for all of the models that we handle. Our staff handled themselves in a professional manner and that made the transition that much easier for all of us."

Now, Evergates pointed out, "we hope that we can continue to grow in a positive manner because that means that we can better serve the public."

Evergates credited Tom McManus, Sr. and Tom McManus, Jr. with being innovators in the automobile industry. "They've shown by their hard work and dedication to the public that an auto dealership can be profitable and truly responsive to each and every customer."

Proving that the McManus family is responsive to the community, Evergates noted, "is the recent gift they made to the Town of Wakefield. We provided a lift to the Town Mechanic so that he can better service police and fire vehicles."

128 Auto also provides a free automobile to the Fire Department for its Fire Prevention Officer.

For the past two years, 128 Auto has sponsored the Annual K-9 Walk for the Muscular Dystrophy Association. This event raises tens of thousands of dollars for badly needed research.

128 Auto provides its facilities as a staging area and donates the top prize to the individual who raises the most funds for the event. This year's prize was a trip to the Bahamas, with a stop-over in Disney World in Orlando, Florida.

Roving from S-4

and I wondered if the dim light of the moon would be enough to illuminate the tiny creature. Nothing. The meowing stopped. Suddenly, my eyes caught something else. What I thought was the flicker of a flame. Then it was gone. I thought for a fleeting instant that I heard voices. Gentle laughing. Children's voices. Then the sounds faded. The flicker was gone. Had it been the moon and its carefree dancers casting shadows and playing more tricks on my eyes? Had the sound of voices been simply the benign breeze that carressed the barren boughs of the lonely oak trees that stood like guardians over the vast backyard and the field beyond. Or was all this a dream, a dream through which I was sleepwalking, a habit that was not uncommon in my life, and would soon awake from? No matter what the answer, I was determined to dismiss it all and return to bed. I closed and locked the window and tried my best to once again fall asleep.

I was awakened yet a third time. I wasn't sure how much time had passed. This time a completely different sound had interrupted my sleep. It again came from outside, and it was faint, very faint. The sound resembled a car engine warming up. It was not the van's engine - I was sure of that, so I didn't bother worrying that somebody was attempting to steal the van. No, it was more the sound of a car engine. Had someone stopped out in front of the house for some unknown reason?

I wondered if this was just another part of the dream. Had that cheeseburger I'd eaten earlier in the evening caused me to have this crazy series of dreams? Or was I actually hearing the sound of a car engine idling outside the house?

I climbed out of bed and, since I was still dressed, decided to check the situation out for myself. At once Roger's bedroom door opened, and Roger emerged. A curious look had washed over his face.

He asked, "Is there something wrong?" as he tugged on the belt of his bathrobe.

"I thought I heard a car out front," I replied. "I thought I'd just check it out."

"I don't hear anything," he said.

"My bedroom faces the backyard and it's close to the back of the garage," I said. "You're facing the front of the house."

"But there wouldn't be a car running in the garage," Roger said. "My grandfather's car is in there, remember?"

We both stepped outside; the cool night air was invigorating against my face. Roger led the way to the garage. We didn't bother opening the swinging doors to peek inside; there was no need, since neither one of us heard the sound of a car engine running inside. We glimpsed up and down the deserted, secluded road; there wasn't a car anywhere in sight.

"I don't know what you heard," said Roger, "but it wasn't a car. Unless there was one parked out front for a while, then it left. But there's definitely no car out here now."

I explained what I heard and saw - of thought I heard and saw, and Roger responded predictably by saying, "'If you ask me, there are simple explanations. The noise you heard upstairs was probably just a mouse. The meowing sound might be a stray cat living somewhere in the back..."

"'Roger," I interrupted as we reached the top of the stairs. "There's no light on in my bedroom!"

We stopped in our tracks and checked out the bedroom in which I had been sleeping. Indeed there was no light coming from the room.

"Maybe you shut it off before you went downstairs," he aid.

"I don't remember shutting the light off, Rog."

He followed me into the bedroom. I flicked on the light again - it worked perfectly, so it wasn't a bulb that burned out, which was my first thought (well, second thought). I went to the window, again pulled back the curtain, this time tucking the flimsy material over the corner of the ledge in order to keep it from closing.

"Out there," I said, pointing down to the stretch of backyard that was adjacent to the garage.

"That's where I saw the fire flickering. I was sure I heard voices also. They were faint, but I heard them. They were laughing, hooping it, like they were having a party."

Roger regarded me with total disbelief, and frankly, I couldn't blame him. "This is silly," he said. "We are both exhausted now. Let's call it a night. Tomorrow morning we'll get the furniture loaded up early and we'll go back to Boston."

M.E's for You

Roving from S-12

We retired, and thankfully I slept without another strange occurrence waking me up. The next morning we arose, had coffee, which Roger made, and we went about our business of moving furniture. When we finished, Roger secured the house. While he did I strolled out into the backyard, curiously poking around he area in which I had thought I'd seen the fire the night before. Except for the old camp fire site that had been there for some time, there were no traces of a recent fire.

Then I glanced up at the window to the bedroom in which I'd spent the night, and it was at that moment that I was hit with one more unexplainable occurrence.

At that moment Roger appeared next to the garage. "Take a look," I said, nodding upwards.

Roger's eyes trailed mine. I said, "The window. I pulled the curtain back last night, and I left it that way. Now it's closed again."

"Maybe it was the wind," Roger suggested.

"Yeah," I said, unconvincingly. "Maybe it was the wind."

We climbed into the van and drove away, beginning our slow, lumbering trek back to 88 Exeter Street, Boston.

Avoid holiday weight gain

Tempting treats, festive drinks and parties during the upcoming holidays, along with the additional stress that accompanies the season, often lead to an end-of-the-year weight gain. In fact, research shows that the average American gains 7.4 pounds during the holidays!

"Trim Down, Getting Through the Holidays," a weight maintenance program offered by New England Memorial Hospital (NEMH0, Stoneham, will provide strategies to help participants avoid gaining weight at this time of year.

The class will discuss how stress, especially holiday stress, affects the diet, and what can be done to manage stress so that any weight gain is minimized. Members will learn how to modify recipes to turn high-fat, high-calorie holiday foods into delicious, low-fat treats.

"Trim Down, Getting Through the Holidays" meets on November 15 and 29 and December 13 and 27, from 7 to 8 p.m. For more information, or to register for the program, call the NEMH Center for Health Promotion at (617) 979-7057.
